President's Congress Call Spurs Work On Aid Plan

Tasks of Agencies Eased, European Governments Are Greatly Cheered

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

President Truman's call for a special session of Congress has speeded up the whole process of planning for European emergency relief and long-term recovery.

The President's decision cut through a tangle of uncertainties that were beginning to baffle American Government agencies and foreign goveraments alike. Those who are working on the so-called Marshall Plan in Washington now know more clearly where they stand and what has to be done before Congress assembles.

Enormously Encouraged

European governments, watching their dollars dwindle fast, have been enormously encouraged by the summoning of Congress. The chief fear expressed in some Washington embassies is that a partisan debate on prices may delay action on desperately needed relief for Europe.

Most government agencies involved in the effort here are vastly relieved that the President will go directly to Congress for the necessary funds instead of trying to find substitute sources of money, such as the Commodity Credit Corporation or the Export-Import Bank.

Now that the futile search has ended, the process of seeking stopgap funds has become simpler, and the complex business of working out a long-term "Marshall Plan" reconstruction program can move ahead more straight forwardly.

In Single Package

Senator Robert A. Taft disclosed over the weekend that the Administration intends to submit its recommendations for stop-gap aid and long-term reconstruction in a single package. This course was recommended by some of the Congressmen who went to Europe this fall, on the grounds that:

1. Congress could not be expected to act intelligently on short-term aid without knowing what Europe needed for the longer pull, and what the Administration had in mind to meet the long-term problem; and

2. It might be harder to get support later for an intelligent European reconstruction program if it were divorced now from the request for urgent short-term aid.

Probable Contents

It is not yet know whether a direct request for at least the first year of the Marshall Plan will accompany the request for winter relief appropriations. But the "package" to be delivered to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on November 10 is expected to include:

1. A request for more than a bil-

Group Supporting 'Hostile Witnesses' Headed by Bogart

More than two score Hollywood celebrities, sleepy and buffeted by autographed seekers, landed at National Airport last night to protest procedures of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The actors, writers and directors—26 of them—had set up a press conference for a late hour. They already had given interviews at stops along the way after taking off from Los Angeles at 8 a. m. yesterday.

At Kansas City, the United Press reported, "autograph hounds were all over the place, but nobody was overheard asking any of the stars what they thought about civil liberties."

Headed by Bogart

The notables, headed by Humphrey Bogart and said to represent the Hollywood "Committee for the First Amendment," will be in the House caucus room today to support what Chairman Thomas (R., N. J.) termed his Un-American Activities Committee's first "hostile" witnesses. These will be led off by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

The association led with a haymaker last night when its attorney, Paul V. McNutt, demanded that the House Committee list all pictures it considers communistic, and open argument on them, or "absolve the industry" of Communist charges.

McNutt wrote committee members that references had been made in its hearings to a list of "all the pictures which have been produced in Hollywood in the last eight years which contain Communist propaganda." By refusing to furnish such a list, he said, the committee had cast suspicion on "all pictures." He demanded:

"What pictures are on such a list?

"What lines and what scenes contain Communist propaganda?

"What opportunity will be given to answer and refute the charges?"

To Ask "Yes" or "No"

Members of the committee said yesterday they expected to put it directly to four movie writers today to say yes or no as to whether they were or ever had been Communists. The writers are Howard Lawson, Dalton Trumbo, Alvah Bessie and Emmett Lavery, who were mentioned by previous witnesses as "acting" like Communists.

The same plan is expected to be followed with other "hostile" witnesses. Any refusing to answer could be cited for contempt of the committee and Congress, leading to a court trial with possibility of fine and imprisonment upon conviction.

If any answered "no," the com-

The Post Poll

Renewed Food Price Controls Favored by 42% in D. C. Area

The average Washington area family is spending approximately $21 a week on food eaten at home. Many of them would welcome a return to price controls on food.

Forty-two per cent of local residents favor a return to price controls on food and, moreover, they believe these controls would be effective. An additional 28 per cent like the idea of controlling food prices, but have some doubts about whether it would prove workable.

Only 24 per cent are definitely opposed to going back to food price controls, while the remainder are undecided.

Families Stretch Budgets

The majority of Washington families say they are stretching their grocery budgets by buying less of certain foods, mostly meats, butter and eggs.

Many ingenious housewives are filling their market baskets with cheaper foods in place of those they usually prefer. Thirty-one per cent are buying oleo in place of butter, and 41 per cent are making substitutions for the more expensive meats.

These findings of the Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of adults living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Local residents were asked:

"On the average, how much does your family spend on food each week, including milk?"

These were as follows:

	Of all families
$10 or less	8%
$11 to $15	17
$16 to $20	26
$21 to $25	21
$26 to $30	12
$31 and over	16

Average $21 a Week

Median expenditure for food brought into the home was $21 a week, the same figure found by the Gallup Poll in September for nonfarm areas in the country.

Average food expenditures vary with the family income as follows:

Annual Family Income	Median Weekly Food Expenditures
Less than $2000	$16
$2000-$2999	$19
$3000-$4999	$20
$5000-$7499	$22
$7500 and over	$27

In addition to money spent on food brought into the home, 49 per cent of Washington families spend money on meals eaten at restaurants.

Post Pollers then asked:

"How would you feel about a return to price controls on food?"

Speaking Frankly

Bipartisan Policy Begets Confidence, Byrnes Feels

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—6 of 15 chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Bros. Copyright, 1947, by Donald S. Russell, trustee of the James F. Byrnes Foundation (a charitable trust).

By James F. Byrnes

THE responsibilities that clearly are ours will be discharged in the years ahead only if we develop in international affairs a policy that truly reflects the will of our people. I am convinced that to build a people's foreign policy we must pursue three primary objectives.

First, we must have a foreign policy that is bipartisan in its origin and development; that is national rather than political in its conduct and its character; and that, consequently, is a continuing policy worthy of the confidence of other nations.

Second, we must have an institution that is responsive to the will of the people and able to translate our policies into effective action.

And third, we must leave behind the era of secret diplomacy. We must make sure that our people have an opportunity to know the problems their diplomats confront so that they can judge properly the proposed solution. The right of the people to know is a basic element in the development of a people's foreign policy.

These objectives, I know from experience, are not easy to attain. But the story of what I encountered in my pursuit of them may be of some service in the work that lies ahead.

At Yalta, immediately after the Big Three agreed to support the Dumbarton Oaks proposal and before he left the conference table, President Roosevelt instructed Secretary Stettinius to name, as members of the delegation to the San Francisco Conference, Senator Connally and Senator Vandenberg. They worked in harmony with Secretary Stettinius at San Francisco and their wholehearted cooperation was largely responsible for the almost unanimous vote by which our adherence to the United Nations was approved by the Senate.

Role of Dulles

BEFORE the first meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, I decided to invite a prominent Republican well informed on international affairs to accompany me. It did not occur to me then that a Senator could be away for so long a time as the treaty-drafting business was likely to consume. I consulted Senator Vandenberg. He suggested that I invite Mr. John Foster Dulles, who for years has been keenly interested in our foreign relations and is exceptionally well qualified. Mr. Dulles accepted the invitation, notwithstanding his business commitments, and was of great assistance. Later I recommended to President Truman that Mr. Dulles be a member of our delegation to the first meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations. He accom-

Americans To Get Less Meat in 1948

Price Cut Chances Slim, According to Government Forecast

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Meat for the average American next year will be 10 pounds less than he ate this year, with little chance of lower prices, the Bureau of Agriculture Economics forecast yesterday.

Nevertheless, the bureau reported, he will have 19 pounds more than he had before the war.

But as far as current meat prices are concerned, the American Meat Institute yesterday reported a "sharp reduction" in wholesale prices. This drop from 4 to 17 cents below the summer peak, was ascribed to increased seasonal production of meat begun in September.

The institute added that "while retail prices do not go up or down as fast as wholesale prices, the declines shortly should be increasingly apparent to careful shoppers."

The Federal Reserve Board also entered the price picture with an appeal to business not to relax terms on installment buying after controls expire Saturday. The board warned merchants, banks and finance companies that "there could not be a worse time to encourage the public to go deeper and deeper into debt."

"Demand for automobiles and many other durable goods . . . is still far in excess of supply," the board said. "Easier credit will not add to the supply. It can only in-

Pound Loaf of Bread Up 1 to 2 Cents Today

A 1-pound loaf of bread will cost housewives 14 or 15 cents today in most Greater Washington stores, or 1 to 2 cents more than last week, retailers indicated yesterday.

The expected increases follow a wholesale price rise of 1 cent a pound announced by bakers on Friday and Saturday.

Both local and out-of-town bakers are charging higher prices, most of them beginning today. The increase here is just one week behind a similar boost in bread prices in other Eastern and Midwestern cities.

Bakers said yesterday the increase from 11 to 12 cents a pound wholesale reflects soaring grain prices of the past few months, which have boosted the price of flour to $8.20 a hundredweight. Not long ago, they said, it was $4.10.

Retailers said they expected most breads would sell for 14 or 15 cents from today on, although the fancier grades may be higher.

Bakers whose products will cost 1 cent more wholesale today include General Baking Co., makers of Bond bread, Continental Baking Co., makers of Wonder bread, Holmes Bakery, Holzbeirlein & Sons, Inc. and Charles Schneider Baking Co.

Chamber Head Sees Tax Cut as Check to Inflation

The argument that Federal tax reduction would lead to checking inflation, rather than increasing it, was advanced yesterday by Earl O. Shreve, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"I am convinced there would be infinitely greater assurance of production volume sufficient to check inflation if taxes were reduced," he said in a statement. The statement urged a reduction "at the coming session of Congress."

Shreve said opposition to tax reduction "comes chiefly from those desiring continuance of liberal (Government) spending programs." Actually, he argued, the results of tax reduction would be: "Increased revenues for the Treasury—more and lower-priced goods for consumers—more jobs in industry—sounder and more enduring prosperity."

Soviet Wants Holy Land Under U. N.

Interim Control By Council Sought If Partition Plan Is Given Approval

Lake Success, Oct. 26 (AP).—Russia will ask the United Nations to place Palestine under the veto-conscious Security Council pending final independence for Jewish and Arab nations through the partition plan, an authoritative source said today.

This source said the Russian proposal would be put before a partition subcommittee of the Assembly's 57-nation Palestine committee this week, probably tomorrow. It would mean that Russia, the United States, Britain, France and China would have the right to veto decisions affecting the Holy Land in the interim period between the time the Assembly approved partition and the two created nations were ready to stand on their own.

Arabs Bitterly Oppose Plan

The whole proposal, of course, was based on the assumption that the U. N. would approve the partition plan recommended by the Special Committee on Palestine (UNSCOP) and indorsed by Russia and the United States. The Arabs bitterly oppose the plan.

It was understood that the Soviet Union would argue that the Holy Land administration for the interim period should be under the Security Council because that is the only U. N. body with enforcement powers.

United States sources declined comment on the projected step, but on the basis of sharp criticism of Russia's 22 vetoes in the Council, would be expected to seek another method. Other possibilities would be to ask the British to continue their mandate until the time for actual independence arrived or to put supervision under the Trusteeship Council or General Assembly, giving these bodies the opportunity to call on the Security Council for enforcement help if needed.

Decisions Up to Assembly

An American spokesman said only that a group of State Department experts have been working on proposals for implementation of a partition decision and hope to have recommendations ready this week. A committee vote on partition itself may come in the committee late this week, but the final decision will be up to the full Assembly.

The Russian "warmonger" resolution, key proposal of the Soviet delegation at the 1947 Assembly, will come up after vote in the 57-nation Political Committee tomorrow with delegates giving it no chance of passage. Russia suffered a 29 to 12 setback in committee yesterday to efforts to refer the plan to a drafting committee for coordination with three counter-proposals.

There were reports, unconfirmed by the Soviet Union, that Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky would make a last-minute effort to salvage his plan by agreeing to eliminate the direct accusations of "warmongering" against

CCC May Underwrite British on Tobacco

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Tht Department of Agriculture's tobacco branch director, Charles Gage, said today he believed there were no serious objections to a proposal that the Commodity Credit Corporation underwrite British tobacco purchases on American markets.

Gage told this to reporters during a recess in a conference among British and American tobacco officials with Agriculture Department representatives about a plan that might set up the CCC as Britain's market representative, and pave the way for a price revival on the flagging flue-cured markets.

The Agriculture Department spokesman said he felt sure that Secretary Anderson would give careful consideration to the plan in Washington tomorrow.

More Rallies Set

Chest Drive Speeds Up This Week

Community Chest workers will continue preliminary activities this week launching this year's drive for $3,900,000 on November 6.

Solicitations begun last week in Government agencies will be intensified, with workers attempting to reach every Federal employe for a donation.

During the week, several rallies for Federal workers will be held. Three are scheduled today, one at the Bureau of Aeronautics and two at the Army Institute of Pathology.

As the Government unit intensified its soliciting, the number of speakers telling the story of Red Feather services will increase to a rate of about 30 or more each day, officials said. Eventually, more than 300 specially trained volunteer speakers will be in the field.

Volunteers already have addressed 175 meetings, according to the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, chairman of the Speakers' Bureau. Most popular type of presentation, he said, has been the brief talk, followed by a question and answer period.

"There is no doubt that a sense of enthusiasm for the campaign is developing, and a more favorable general atmosphere or public attitude is being felt as campaign plans progress," according to William J. McManus, vice chairman. "I believe the Speakers' Bureau activities have a large share in that change in public opinion."

A partial list of engagements to be filled today by volunteer Chest federation speakers follows:

Clay Seeking Greater Power Of Decision

State Department And Army Discussing Occupation Authority

To Stay in Berlin

Berlin will be headquarters of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, regardless of the London Conference of Foreign Ministers, he says. Page 2.

Foreign Policy Involved

General Lucius D. Clay's powers as head of the military government in Germany are the subject of new discussions between the State and Army Departments, it was learned yesterday.

The general wants greater powers of decision in his own hands, now that the State Department has "indefinitely postponed" the switch to civilian rule in the occupied areas.

He does not see why he should have to refer endless decisions to the State Department for approval when the State Department has announced that it will not try to govern in the occupation zones for a long time.

Stormy Future Probable

The trouble arises from the fact that so many of Clay's decisions have repercussions on American foreign policy, just as the State Department's political decisions often affect military government. The general is an able but strong-willed administrator who has often differed with State Department ideas on occupation matters.

Politically the coming months promise to be stormy for General Clay, quite apart from the endless disagreements with Russia which probably will come to a head at next month's meeting of the Foreign Ministers in London.

It had been assumed until now that failure to reach agreement with the Russians would result in the creation of a so-called "Trizonia" in western Germany, with the French finally merging their occupation zone with those of the Americans and the British.

This prospect may be altered

De Gaullists Trail Radical Socialists in Runoff Vote

Violence Flares In Paris Suburbs But Towns Go To Polls Quietly

Paris, Oct. 26 (AP).—Violence flared in some Paris suburbs and other French cities as voters in 14,800 villages and towns of less than 9000 population completed tonight their choice of municipal councils.

The runoff elections in the smaller communities, held to fill seats for which no majority was obtained in last Sunday's nationwide municipal elections, took place quietly with no disorders reported immediately. The violence broke out yesterday and today in larger places where councillors chosen last week were electing mayors.

The anti-Communist Rally of the French Peoples Party (RPF) headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle sought to increase in the runoffs the margin of victory scored in last Sunday's voting when the RPF won almost 40 per cent of the votes in approximately 37,000 larger cities and towns—more than any other party.

Socialist Party Profits

First returns from today's council elections indicated the Socialist party had profited from the struggle between De Gaulle's party and the Communists.

Returns from 2257 of the 14,800 communities voting today showed these results:

Radical Socialists—2239 councillors elected.

Socialists—1049.

Rightists—793.

RPF—583.

Communists—529

Popular Republican Movement (MRP)—168.

Various—332.

Overshadowing today's election, however, was the twin threat of a cabinet crisis and paralyzing labor strikes.

Despite the grim outlook, a break in the Communist-dominated labor front occurred tonight when the railwaymen's section of the central union called on its members to "remain calm and refuse to participate in a strike which would be more political than trade union."

Worst Violence in Lille

The worst violence in connection with choosing of mayors occurred in the northern industrial city of Lille, where Communists forced their way into the town hall through a police cordon and interrupted the voting.

The labor situation was causing governmental leaders concern. The Central Union of Public Service Employes will decide Monday whether to go out on general strike. It includes the union of railway men, postal workers and all other public services employes, including civil servants. It is affiliated with the Communist-led Conferation of Labor (CGT).

To Ask Confidence Vote

On Tuesday Premier Paul Ramadier will ask a vote of confidence in his reshuffled cabinet at the opening of an extraordinary session of the National Assembly. He has declared that the republic is "in danger" both from the Communists onthe left and General De Gaulle on the right. The vote will not be taken until Thursday.

23 Die, 70 Hurt In Derailment of British Express

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—An express train bound from Edinburgh to London was derailed today, and the British Press Association reported at least 23 persons were killed.

Seventy others were injured.

Twenty bodies had been recovered by dusk, and rescue workers toiled on to recover at least two others seen trapped, the Press Association said.

The accident followed by two days a collision of two electric trains at Croydon, near London, in which 31 persons were killed and more than 60 injured.

Your Post Carrier Will Be Visiting You Soon

Your Washington Post carrier will be visiting you in the very near future to make his regular monthly collection. You can make his job easier by having his money ready for him the first time he calls, so it won't be necessary for him to make a second or third trip. He's a busy young man, you know, and unnecessary call-backs to collect your paper bill interfere with his studies, which go on just the same during collection period.

Just as your bus or trolley operator likes you to "have your fare ready, please," your Post carrier likes you to have the paper money ready for him the first time he calls to collect. Please cooperate with him in this time-saving effort.

Shifting of Carrier Cures Shakes at Freehold House

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Historic Fenwick Freehold House, one of America's oldest estates, has high hopes of celebrating its 300th birthday a few years hence, now that its private war with the Navy has been peacefully settled.

But for a time recently it looked like its ancient girders were going to crumble under a kamikaze attack by one of Washington's naval air reservists or shake apart under the vibrations of their low-flying Corsairs and Hellcats.

Fenwick Freehold, built about 1660 by one of the Ark and Dove colonists, adjoins Webster Field in southern Maryland. The latter is now the training field for the Anacostia-based naval reserve fliers of the Washington area. The house stood up all right during the war despite the constant roar of planes overhead.

But when the local airmen took over it was different. They train weekends to operate from an aircraft carrier in a future war and as most of our flat-tops are laid up in "mothballs," the part-time Navy men practice their takeoffs and landings on a "carrier deck," marked off on Webster Field's runway. Fenwick Freehold House was right in the way of their low-flying approach to their "carrier."

James A. Sterling, present owner of the old estate, an old flier himself, stood matters as long as possible. Then he protested to authorities at nearby Patuxent Naval

Maine Counts 13 Dead

Weary Crews Gain Control Of Far-Flung Forest Blazes

Portland, Me., Oct. 28 (AP).—While Maine authorities intensified precautions against pyromaniacs, dog-tired fire fighters managed today—for the first time in a week—to hold the line against far-flung New England forest blazes.

As the death toll rose to 21, "under control" reports came in from nearly all areas.

In Maine—hardest hit with eight communities wholly or almost obliterated, 13 dead and scores injured—Gov. Horace Hildreth estimated damage in that State alone was "in excess of 30 million dollars. This was five million dollars higher than previous estimates. Throughout the State today fire reports were "good" or "under control."

Hildreth's office authorized a statement that authorities are "watching closely" the movements of all persons who they have reason to suspect might be firebugs.

There was no elaboration but Joseph F. Young, deputy chief of Maine State Police, said there had been no roundup of suspects and so far as he knew none was in custody.

Maine—the hardest hit—has eight communities wholly or almost obliterated, with 13 dead, scores injured and damage set at 25 million dollars. Reports throughout Maine today was "good" or "under control." An estimated 100,000 acres of woodland were blackened.

Latest figures released by the Red Cross in Maine are: Homeless, 2500; permanent homes destroyed, 836; summer homes, 220; communities affected, 35. There also are about 3500 displaced persons. National Guards and police patrol the

Food Conservation Committees Named

21 Groups Set Up by Colliflower To Further Campaign in District

Twenty-one subcommittees were established yesterday by James E. Colliflower, chairman of the D. C. Citizens' Food Conservation Committee, to aid in spreading the food saving campaign into every home in the community.

The 21 groups will cover every organization and business in the District of Columbia, Colliflower said in announcing the appointment of subcommittee chairmen.

The "utmost speed" is necessary for the success of the conservation drive, he said. It can be attained only if "every individual in the District" cooperates with the Conservation Committee, he declared.

Cooperation Essential

"Among the things we are asking of those who consume meals in public eating places," said Colliflower, "is that they do not embarrass employes by asking for anything we are trying to conserve. Those places have stated that they are going to cooperate with us in every way possible. We are asking everyone, therefore, to eat at least one slice of bread less each day. We are also asking that they eat no meat on Tuesdays and no poultry or eggs on Thursdays."

The conservation chairman appealed to residents of Virginia and Maryland who work and shop in the District to "adopt this conservation program for their own."

Colliflower and his assistants will meet with the chairmen of all the new committees at 3:30 p. m. on Thursday in the board room of the District Building to formulate definite plans for each group.

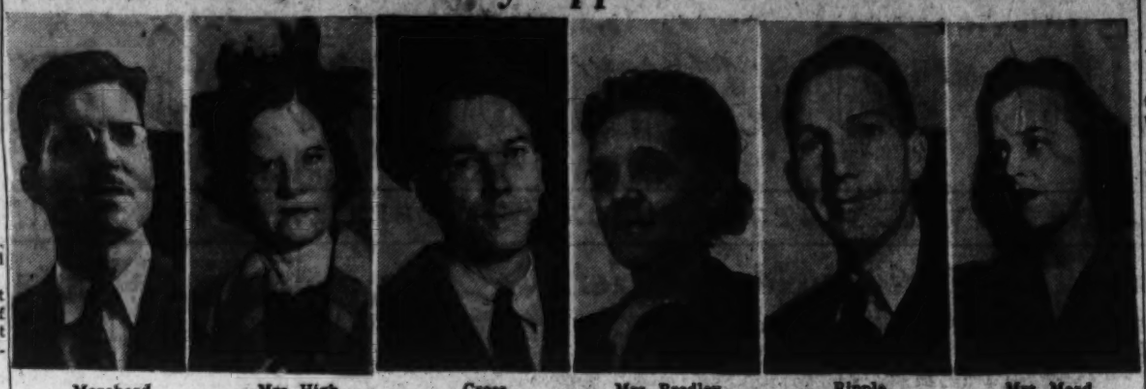
District Residents Generally Approve Some Price Controls



Morehead

Four of the six persons queried in random interviews about a return to price controls on food were in favor of it.

Arthur Morehead of 3880 Rodman st. nw., father of two small daughters, estimates his family food bill, including milk, at $30 a week. Morehead, who is with the National Red Cross, says price controls "are the only way you can get equitable distribution, as long as supply doesn't equal demand."

Mrs. High

Mrs. Robert High of 413 E. Capitol st., who cooks for four, also estimates her food bill, including milk, at about $30 a week.

Mrs. High and her husband, a laundryman, believe price controls and rationing would better the situation. "If salaries would go up as soon as prices did, it would be all right," they say, "but salaries don't. That is why there are so many strikes all the time."

Cross

Robert V. Cross of 3110 S. Hayes st., Arlington, Va., Navy Department budget analyst, also favors return of price controls.

His grocery bill averages $28 a week.

"Prices are running wild," says Cross, father of a 3-year-old daughter. "They are getting beyond what a man can afford to spend, despite all the talk, when price controls were removed, about competition bringing prices down."

Mrs. Bradley

"I think things would be cheaper with price controls," says Mrs. Hazel Bradley of 17 V st. nw., widowed mother of two sons, aged 10 and 12 years.

Mrs. Bradley, who is employed as a maid, estimates her food bill at $30 a week. "People receiving low salaries have to pay just as much as others," she says, "so why shouldn't price controls and rationing come back?"

Ripple

J. Franklin Ripple of Clinton, Md., owner and operator of the Franklin Broom Co., believes a return to price controls "wouldn't work."

Ripple, whose wife estimates the weekly food bill for both of them is about $25, says, "If prices are controlled to the point where a profit cannot be made, then the commodity gets scarce, and that puts it on the black market."

Mrs. Mead

Mrs. Catherine Meade, of 511 Prince St., Alexandria, Va., is doubtful that price controls could work.

Mrs. Meade and her husband, a War Department clerk, have a 4-month old son and their weekly food bill is about $25.

"Price controls might be all right on some things," she said.

If price controls are restored at all, she would prefer to see them only on essentials.

Where Opposition Lies

Chief opposition to a return to price control on foods comes from upper income groups. Only 5 per cent with family incomes under $2000 are opposed to the idea, as compared with 21 per cent with incomes from $2000 to $2999; 27 per cent opposed with incomes $3000 to $4999; 27 per cent with incomes from $5000 to $7499, and 39 per cent with incomes of $7500 and over.

Local residents were asked:

"Are you buying less of any foods?" (If "Yes") "Which are you cutting down on?"

tensify demand and accentuate the upward pressure on prices."

Controls expiring Saturday apply to automobiles, washing machines, refrigerators, and other appliances and require generally a one-third down payment and completion of payments in 15 months.

Other Developments

Other developments in the price and food fields yesterday were:

1. Chairman Charles Luckman of the President's Food Committee said the committee would send a "Train of Friendship" from coast to coast gathering food for hungry Europe. This train, he said, would "show the people of Europe that the people of the United States are anxious and willing to assist them."

The train was expected to start from Los Angeles November 7 with five carloads of food donated by people of that city. It was scheduled to reach New York November 18 after stops at major cities along the way. Representatives of the French and Italian governments and an assortment of movie and radio stars will be aboard.

2. A spokesman for the committee said there was no reason to doubt that practically the entire liquor industry had entered the 60-day halt on distilling to save grain for Europe. The committee had promises from 95 per cent of the industry to close down at midnight.

Gop Program Reported

3. Republican leaders in Congress, caught flat-footed by President Truman's call for a special session November 17 with emphasis on combatting the high cost of living, were said to be studying an anti-inflation plan of their own. Neither the President nor the GOP is expected to seek a return of rationing, but both are said to be ready to recommend some form of allocations of scarce materials, with the Republicans hot for income tax reduction.

4. Some 100 leaders of business, industry and labor will meet today at the White House to talk over domestic economic troubles and long-range aid to Europe. Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman will preside.

Reasons for Forecast

The Agriculture Department, in its forecast of next year's meat situation, said:

"Because of fewer livestock and the smaller feed grain supplies, output of meat in 1948 probably will be around 1.5 billion pounds less than in 1947.

"Meat consumption per person next year probably will be about 146 pounds, 10 pounds less than in 1947."

The prewar average was about 127 pounds per person.

Most of the increase resulted from larger consumption of beef, which jumped from 53.6 pounds per person in 1944 to 60 pounds in 1946 and 70 pounds this year. Consumption of veal in the same period dropped from 12.4 pounds per person to 11 pounds; lamb and mutton from 6.6 pounds in 1944 to 6 pounds this year; and pork from 80.2 pounds in 1944 to 69 pounds this year.

Profit at High Mark

The report also showed that cattle raisers were making more profit on each steer now than ever before in history. An average sized steer (1050) pounds) brought an average of $278.67 at the Chicago stockyards so far this year. The cost of raising the steer and getting him to market averaged $199.04, leaving a net profit of $79.63.

The 1946 average profit on a steer was $38.07 and the average for 1939-40 was $15.55 a head.

"Exceptionally strong consumer demand," the report said, "has raised prices of meat and meat animals to record levels in 1947.

"Demand is expected to continue unusually strong for at least the first half of 1948. Even if it falls off some time in the last half, meat animal prices for the year probably will average as high as in 1947."

More Credit Not Needed

The Federal Reserve Board, in its appeal for voluntary continued installment restrictions, said:

"Easier terms should await a time when growth of credit is needed to maintain full production.

"That time has not arrived and it is not in immediate prospect. Employment and national income are at all-time peaks. Inflationary forces continue to exert powerful upward pressures on the general price level."

The board said that in spite of shortages of goods and controls in effect, the volume of installment credit had grown by more than three billion dollars since the end of the war. It observed:

"Even this is too rapid a rate of growth under the prevailing inflationary conditions. Experience has shown that rapid and excessive expansion of this type of credit is followed by a sharp reversal."

Natives Meet Tonight

The Society of Natives will hold its regular monthly meeting at 8 tonight in the north room of the Mayflower Hotel. Fred A. Emery, past president of the group, will speak on "Navy Day and Theodore Roosevelt." The Silver Shield Quartette of the Metropolitan Police Department will sing at the meeting.

"reactionary circles in the United States, Turkey and Greece."

The United States maintained its opposition to all proposals now before the committee including the Russian, French, Canadian and Australian versions. The last three generally condemn war propaganda, but United States spokesmen have contended that any resolution voted on the subject—regardless of its nature—was certain to be interpreted by Russia as a victory and a condemnation of the United States.

Anti-Franco Forces May Ask Trade Ban

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Anti-Franco forces in the United Nations are considering asking the 57 U. N. countries to refrain from new trade agreements or other commercial arrangements with Spain, it was learned tonight.

A formal proposal embodying such steps may be introduced in the 57-nation Political and Security Committee of the U. N. General Assembly when it takes up for the second straight year the hot potato of relations between U. N. countries and Franco Spain.

Leaders in the anti-Franco fight which has arisen at every session of the Assembly have been Russia, Poland, the other Soviet bloc states and several Latin American countries. It was known that representatives of these nations have been consulting each other.

Yugoslavia to Hang Convicted Slayers, Spy

Belgrade, Oct. 26 (AP).—Belgrade newspapers said today a county court in Ljubljana had sentenced Franc Ahachich to death by hanging after he had been found guilty of being a "killer, spy, bandit and plunderer."

These accounts said Ahachich was charged with giving military information to the British intelligence in Austria, killing two Yugoslav officers and robbing government institutions of considerable sums of money.

He was brought to trial with 15 accomplices. Twelve were sentenced to from one to five years and three were freed.

14 Romanian Refugees Reach Turkey by Plane

Istanbul, Oct. 26 (AP).—Reliable but unofficial sources said today 14 Romanian refugees arrived in a single-engined airplane at Istanbul airport yesterday, bringing to nearly 70 the number of persons who have fled from Romania, in the Russian sphere, to Turkey since June.

U. S. to Stay In Berlin, Clay Says

(World Copyright by United Press)

Berlin, Oct. 26.—Berlin will continue to be headquarters of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, regardless of the outcome of the London Conference of Foreign Ministers, the American military governor for Germany said today.

"The only way United States forces would leave Berlin would be by force of arms or a peace treaty with Germany," he said.

Asked if he were apprehensive of removal by force, he said:

"I do not believe force would be applied at this time to remove us from Berlin.

"We are here to stay regardless of possible obstacles and difficulties."

Clay said next year is one of decision "and the next six months are vital ones."

"If we are able to help Europe back on its feet, then the situation should be eased by next June or July," he added.

The general hoped a definite decision about Germany would be reached during the London Conference starting November 25. He stressed that the time has passed when we could afford to play around with this issue. Backing down on compromise was ruled out.

"We are playing this one for keeps," he ruled bluntly. "Putting western Europe back on its feet is a matter of our own existence and security."

Mikolajczyk Flight Believed Promoted By Government

Warsaw, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—The pro-Communist wing of the Polish Peasant Party (PSL) swept itself into power today, seized party headquarters and took over the party newspaper which reported last night that the flight of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk had left the party and Poland with no major foe of communism.

While Warsaw buzzed with rumors on the whereabouts of Mikolajczyk, his secretary, two aides and their wives, the party paper, Gazeta Ludowa, appeared on the streets just before noon with a three-column-bannered story announcing the "escape."

Supporters of Mikolajczyk reported that the left-wingers first prevented regular publication of today's editions, then remade the front page and brought it out themselves.

Most informed observers here were certain the Peasant Party chieftain and his associates had skipped the country with the full knowledge of the Communist-dominated government. They believed that the Russian-sponsored government had sidestepped the risk of foreign reaction to arresting Mikolajczyk by permitting the opposition leader to exile and eliminate himself.

Mikolajczyk, outspoken critic of the powerful Russian influence in the Polish regime, had been under fire even within his own party, and dissident elements on September 5 at the party congress had asked for his removal.

Mikolajczyk recently said that he expected to be arrested.

Mikolajczyk's housekeeper reported that he left Monday by train obstensibly to visit his mother in Poznan. The housekeeper had been told he would return tomorrow.

With Mikolajczyk out of the way, the government bloc was now expected to absorb all remaining opposition parties.

Call Speeds Aid Plan Task

lion dollars to avert what Secretary Marshall called "intolerable hunger and cold" this winter. Tentative estimates, not yet finally approved by the Bureau of the Budget, are 642 million for France and Italy, about 400 million for the occupation zones of Germany, Japan and Korea, and between 20 and 30 million for Austria; and

2. An Administration analysis of the 4-year reconstruction program worked out by 16 non-Soviet nations of Europe, together with recommendations on what the United States can "safely and wisely" do to help during the first year. The Europeans estimated their dollar deficit in 1948 at about 7½ billion dollars, of which more than 5½ billion represented supplies needed from the United States.

The exact amounts to be sought for the first year of the "Marshall Plan" will depend partly on interagency discussions still going on, and partly on the recommendations of Secretary Harriman's 19-man committee of business and professional leaders. A "preliminary" report by the Harriman committee is expected next week.

Apart from the still undecided questions of how much Europe will need and what supplies the United States can provide, many key questions connected with the "Marshall Plan" are still undecided. Among them are these:

1. What sort of agency shall administer the program? When Representative Christian A. Herter returned from Europe with his House Committee on Foreign Aid, he said proper management would be essential in making the reconstruction program work. The choice now lies between a brand-new Government agency, combining some of the functions of the War Production Board and the Lend-Lease Administration, and a Government-financed independent corporation.

The first is naturally favored within the Administration; the second is likely to have strong support in Congress, partly because it could be above suspicion of having political appointees.

2. Will the European nations agree to set up a continuing organization of their own to supervise their collective program? At Paris some of the 16 nations, notably the Scandinavians, were fearful of a continuing organization because it might look to the Russians like an alliance directed against them. Yet it has become clear during the present discussions between European and American technical experts that there must be a stronger organization than the shadowy committees proposed under the Paris program.

3. Will the western European nations or the United States take on the job of approaching other supplying countries, like the Latin-Americans, whose help is essential in the plan?

Western Europe has long been getting much of its food and raw materials from Canada and Latin-America; the Europeans who met at Paris knew that the United States could not furnish those supplies alone. Yet the Latin-Americans have complained that they are short of many supplies themselves, and insist that the United States must pay them dollars for whatever they are able to send to Europe under the "Marshall Plan."

Somebody has to approach them, but the United States has not done so until now. American officials feel Europe must make its own approach to the Latin-Americans for credits with which to go on importing Latin-American supplies.

These are only a few of the issues still undecided. They will have to be worked out within the American Government, and with the spokesmen of the 16-nation European governments, before the congressional committees can get the answers to their inevitable questions.

Meanwhile, the Administration is busily seeking the support of business and labor leaders for a program which will cause some sacrifices, or what has been called more accurately "deferment of cravings," here at home. Nearly 100 prominent private citizens are expected at the White House today for a "closed forum" at which Secretaries Marshall and Harriman, and perhaps President Truman himself, will explain the foreign aid program and its implications.

Truman Pays Tribute to Oscar Straus

President Truman yesterday renewed his plea for admission to the United States of European displaced persons.

Speaking at the dedication of a memorial fountain to Oscar S. Straus, the Jewish immigrant boy who rose high in American public life before his death 21 years ago, the President said the fountain was more than a memorial to a great statesman, diplomat and patriot; it was also "a monument to tolerance and reason."

The President accepted the fountain in the Great Plaza on 14th st. between Constitution ave. and E st. on behalf of the nation from Col. Archibald Roosevelt, son of Theodore Roosevelt and president of the Straus Memorial Association.

Family 'Displaced'

Alluding to the fact that the Straus family had participated in democratic activities in monarchial Europe before coming to the United States in 1852, the President said they were "displaced persons" then.

He said in his extemporaneous address that they came from Bavaria because they believed in freedom of the individual.

"When they failed to get those things in their own country, in 1848, they—with a great number of people of like mind—came to this country and made a contribution for which we can never be grateful enough."

If we had the same situation then that we have now, we might have lost the services of this family, he said.

Would Drop Barriers

The President—whose request to admit 400,000 displaced persons, chiefly Jews, over a four-year period was refused in the last session of Congress—deplored the existence of immigration barriers against displaced persons.

The President, praising Straus' quality of tolerance, said that while he was ambassador to Turkey during the administrations of Presidents Cleveland, McKinley and Taft "he did more for the Christians in Turkey than all the ambassadors we had had there up to that time put together."

With a smile, the President noted that Straus had gone to a Baptist Sunday school in his yard and said "of course that appealed to me, also."

He pointed out that Straus was the author of several books on the history of religious liberty in the United States.

As the President ceased to speak the circular fountain, which is flanked by two allegorical groups in bronze, began to play.

Approximately 1000 persons attended the dedication.

The memorial was authorized by a joint resolution of Congress in 1929 after an informal Nation-wide poll had named Straus as the Jew who, because of his service to the Nation, most deserved to be honored with a statue in the Capital.

Colonel Roosevelt quoted his father, President Theodore Roosevelt, as saying he wanted Straus in his Cabinet: "First, because I have a very high estimate of your character and ability, and also because I want to show Russia and such countries what we think of a Jew in this country."

Recalling Straus' services as a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague from 1902 until his death in 1926, Colonel Roosevelt said he was "an immigrant boy who dedicated his life to peace. I believe no American is more deserving of this memorial."

Straus' memory also was praised in a message from Herbert Hoover, honorary president of the memorial association, and the Rev. R. E. E. Harkness, president of the American Baptist Historical Society, who spoke the invocation, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, who gave the benediction.

Clay's Powers Are Discussed

now in the light of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's election victories in France. De Gaulle has always been more stiff and intransigeant on the German problem than the French governments of the past two years, with whom Clay has had endless difficulties.

If De Gaulle comes into power in France, he may raise new objections to the Anglo-American plan for raising the permitted levels of German industry—a plan reluctantly approved in principle by the present French government last month. He may also insist on far stricter controls over Ruhr industries than those contemplated by the American and British governments.

With the prospect that De Gaulle may come into power, General Clay's demand for stronger authority becomes an issue in American foreign relations. Both the State and Army departments are said to be anxious to settle the issue quickly so that they and the general will know where they stand.

Trumans to Entertain Democratic Leaders

President and Mrs. Truman will give a White House tea Wednesday at 4:30 p. m. for Democratic National Committee members.

The party leaders will be in Washington to select the time and place of the 1948 convention and install Rhode Island's Senator J. Howard McGrath as the new national chairman.

3 Fascists Seized By Italian Police

First Action Taken To Nip Rebirth of Movement in Bud

Rome, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Three leaders of the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI) have been arrested as the first move in a campaign to nip reborn fascism in the bud, Italian police announced today.

Those arrested were Vittorio Ambrosini, Roman defense counsel for the Fascist assassins of Giacomo Matteotti, who later filed suit against the "murderers" of Benito Mussolini; Giorgio Almirante, who campaigned for MSI in the recent Rome elections, and Mario Sabatini, MSI secretary at Catanzaro, in southern Italy.

The three have been charged as individuals with "pro-Fascist activity." Police would not say whether they planned to take action against the MSI under the law which empowers them to dissolve any party "resembling or seeking the revival of fascism."

MSI, whose existence was announced publicly only two weeks before the Rome municipal elections, claims only 2000 members in the Italian capital. Nevertheless, it polled 24,000 votes, and placed three of its representatives on the municipal council.

The party claims a membership of 150,000 throughout Italy.

Left-wing Socialist and Christian Democratic leaders in Parliament said today the campaign against fascism was being intensified.

British Take Their Troops From Iraq

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 26 (AP).—The British army's Middle Eastern headquarters announced today that all British troops, aside from a "small military liquidation staff" clearing up financial details, had been withdrawn from Iraq.

Only the British military mission and two Royal Air Force bases will remain in that strategic oil-producing country, according to the announcement.

An army spokesman said he did not know the number of men withdrawn from Iraq since the war or the number being kept there by the RAF.

"Approval was given for considerable quantities of equipment and vehicles to be made available to the Iraq army," the headquarters statement said.

The mission and RAF bases at Habbania and Shaibah, both west of the Euphrates River, are being retained under terms of the British-Iraqi treaty of 1930.

The British army still has troops and RAF bases in the Suez Canal zone of Egypt. The Egyptian government has tried vainly in recent months to obtain an order from the United Nations for their withdrawal.

(In London, according to the United Press, the withdrawal of British troops from Iraq, completed today, was regarded here as a part of the British cabinet's economy program, which envisions reduction of the nation's armed forces by more than 400,000 men during the next six months to about 810,000.—Editor's note.)

Perfume Salesman Realizes Dream, Leads Symphony

Rome, Oct 26 (AP).—An old, old dream came true today for Vittorio Abbati, 52-year-old Rome perfume salesman.

Abbati, a lover of music, hired himself a hall and a 93-piece symphony orchestra and conducted a full-dress program of symphonic and operatic music—although he can't read a note.

After it was over, the little man, perspiring and his hands shaking so he could hardly hold the baton, said simply:

"I've wanted to do this since I was a baby."

He did, in fact, do all right, helped along as he was by a small but enthusiastic audience, a sure-fire program, the artistry of the Rome Opera House orchestra and occasional coaching from Luigi Casciani, the rotund, smiling concertmaster.

He was able to stage the show, he said, for 300,000 lire $850 at the official exchange rate. His box-office take covered about 2 per cent of that.

40 to Protest Film Inquiry

mittee's evidence would then be brought out and if the committee feels it justified, it could ask the Justice Department to bring a perjury charge.

If a witness answered "yes," the committee could do nothing more than advertise the fact, which might affect his status with his boss.

Go On National Network

While the Hollywood delegation was flying to Washington, other members of the film capital's "Committee for the First Amendment" went on a national radio network to protest against the course of the Capitol Hill hearings. The program concluded with the rining words of Edward G. Robinson, "Hollywood Fights Back," Boom, Boom."

Here's what they had to say:

Judy Garland: "I've never been a member of any political organization but I've been following this investigation by Parnell Thomas' committee and I don't like it. We're show business, yes, but we're also American citizens. It's one thing if someone says we're not good actors. That hurts, but we can take it. It's something else again to say we're not good Americans. We resent that."

Director John Huston: "In nine years the committee has proposed exactly one piece of legislatio and that was rejected as unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court along with a scathing denunciation."

Comedian Danny Kaye quoted Franklin D. Roosevelt's comment: "Most fair-minded Americans hope the committee will abondon the practice of merely providing forum to those who for political purposes or otherwise sek headlines which they could not otherwise obtain."

Florence Eldredge: "Among others slandered by this committe are Mr. Justice Murphy of the Supreme Court, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, Dean Acheson and William Allen White. The motion pitcure people being slandered today are in pretty good company."

Myrna Loy: "Congress has the right to investigate and make laws but we question the right of any official to abuse citizens in order to make headlines."

Robert Young: "Out of 2000 years of men fighting and dying to speak fre came an idea of justice, came a document called the Bill of Rights."

Humphrey Bogart: "The committe is not empowered to dictate what Americans shall think."

Frederic March: "Who do you think they're really after? They're after you."

Marsha Hunt quoted the late Wendell Willkie: "The committee uses methods that undermine the democratic processes. It ruins reputations by public inference and innuendo while denying the protection of counsel."

Lucille Ball read a portion of the Bill of Rights and Keenan Wynn and Henry Morgan dramatized what Van Heflin said were actual quotations of witnesses who appeared before the committee: "I don't have any proof . . ." "I can't give you any specific examples, but everyone knows that . . ." "I don't know for sure but I heard from a reliable source that . . ."

Gene Kelly, Lauren Bacall, Joseph Cotten, Peter Lorre, Walter Wanger, Cornell Wilde, Melvyn Douglas, Richard Conte, Evelyn Keyes, Bert Lancaster, Paul Henreid, William Holden, Robert Ryan and John Garfield also added their voices to the criticism of the committee. Some of the actors who had to leave by plane before the broadcast made their comments on a transcription that was fitted into the program.

Va. Farmers Urged to Aid Food Drive

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Virginia Agricultural Extension Service has called for efficient farm production and feed conservation to aid in the fight against world food shortage.

Specialists urged the fullest possible use of permanent and supplementary pastures as means of cutting grain consumption. They said heavy grazing on pastures could be offset by a pasture fertilization program this winter.

general sanitation were high on the list. Specialists said too much valuable feed goes into parasites and into halfsick animals.

Poultry husbandmen advocated allowing flocks to gather some of their own feed by keeping them outside on pasture two to three hours daily when possible. They cautioned against overfilling feed hoppers and against putting grain out at night where it will invite consumption by rats.

Poultrymen were advised to sell all male birds, except where breeders must be retained. It was recommended that watch be kept for birds that are consuming feed, but not producing satisfactorily.

In finishing hogs or beef animals for market, it was pointed out, use of a good protein supplement in balancing rations will save several bushels of grain on most farms. Specialists said it would be desirable to market hogs at lighter weights of 200 to 225 pounds.

U. S. Not Surprised By Reds' Plans To Occupy Korea

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—A high United States military official said today the Army was not surprised by the statement last week of a young Soviet-trained North Korean who said a North Korean Communist army had completed plans to take over all Korea as soon as occupation forces were withdrawn.

The North Korean, Yoon Chang-Sun, "has merely corroborated facts we've known for some time," the United States official said.

"The so-called master plan of the Communists to take over Korea was uncovered by American intelligence officers as early as September, 1946," he said.

Kashmir Invaded by 2000 Troops

New Delhi, Oct. 26 (AP).—An Indian government official said today 2000 or more Pathans from Pakistan's rugged northwest frontier province have invaded Kashmir and looted, raped and killed.

V. P. Menon, secretary of India's ministry of state, back from the Kashmir capital of Srinigar, said the Moslem invaders had laid waste to the mountain border town of Muzaffarabad, 80 miles west of Srinigar, and were striking against Hindu and Sikh families.

Another official said the Pathans had also crossed into Gilgit, near the Soviet border, and engaged in similar tactics.

Other reports said Indian troops had clashed with forces of Moslem-ruled Junagadh state, in the Kathiawar peninsula, and six Junagadh soldiers were killed.

Invaders Well Armed

Menon said the invaders of Kashmir, well armed with automatic weapons, came from the Khyber pass. The invaders reportedly included Afridi tribesmen, Pakistan soldiers on leave "and desperadoes" in nearly 100 trucks.

Kashmir's army of 10,000 was reported engaging the invaders and was expected to drive them back.

Kashmir, whose beautiful mountains and mirrorlike lakes have made it an Asian playground for centuries, is ruled by the Hindu Maharajah Sir Hari Singh, although most of its 4,000,000 population are Moslems.

It has acceded neither to India nor Pakistan, whose emergence as new dominions in the British Empire has been plagued by costly Moslem-Hindu warfare.

Trouble in South Reported

Trouble was reported flaring also in Poonch, a subsidiary state to the south. This followed a Kashmir protest to Pakistan that the Moslem dominion was withholding vital supplies such as gasoline.

Pakistan Governor General Mahomed Ali Jinnah denied the Kashmir allegations and said he deplored the "tone and language" of the Kashmir protest. He proposed a conference between Kashmir and Pakistan officials in Karachi, but added that "the course which your government is pursuing is suppressing Moslems in every way, and the atrocities which are being committed by your troops are driving the Moslems out of the state."

He declared the real aim of Kashmir's policy was to seek an opportunity to join India.

China Reports Red Repulse In Fight for Key Power Plant

Peiping, Oct. 26 (AP).—Chinese government forces claimed victory today in the first-round battle for the big Manchurian power plant of Hsiaofengman, reporting that the attacking Communists had retired to the hills to lick their wounds after suffering heavy casualties.

The government dispatches, however, predicted that the Communists soon would return to the assault, as the hydroelectric installation, 65 miles southeast of Changchun, is the main sources of south Manchurian power and the best strategic target in the region.

Only this morning the Communists were acknowledged to have fought into the town's outskirts and again to have cut the electric lines leading to Changchun and to Kirin, 15 miles northwest. The later reports did not say how they were thrown out.

Another dispatch from the government's Central News Agency said the Communists had lost 7000 killed and 10,000 wounded or captured in their week-long drive on Kirin before they withdrew and shifted the assault to Hsiaofengman. It added, however, that 20,000 Communists still were grouped around Kirin.

Pro-government press correspondents meanwhile reported a steady stream of well-equipped government reinforcements was arriving by air in Changchun, the Manchurian capital, and that another force was marching there from Szepingkai, 70 miles to the southwest.

(Nanking meanwhile reported that the north bank of the Yangtze River had been entirely cleared of Gen. Liu Po-cheng's Communist raiders after a hot three-day campaign by the army, navy and air force.)

Some Nazis Released To German Courts

U. S. War Crimes Unit Seeks to End Task Early in '48

Nuernberg, Germany, (Monday) Oct. 27 (AP).—United States war crimes courts, preparing to complete their work in Germany early next year, have begun to release prisoners for trial by their own countrymen.

Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, chief prosecutor, announced today that the first group of 30 Germans, implicated in evidence introduced at the trials of other persons here, has been turned over to German custody for prosecution in either criminal or denazification courts.

Eventually United States authorities expect to release hundreds of Germans in this category. They include Fritz Thyssen, an industrialist too ill to be tried now, and Willy Messerschmitt, plane manufacturer against whom a specific case never materialized.

Among the first 30 turned over to the Germans, Taylor said, was Guenther Quandt, German armaments manufacturer and former husband of Mrs. Paul Joseph Goebbels.

A special staff, headed by James E. Heath of Norfolk, Va., has been set up to handle release of the prisoners.

Soviet Cartoon Shows Marshall Lighting Bomb

Moscow, Oct. 26 (AP).—A cartoon in Soviet government newspaper Izvestia today pictured Secretary of State Marshall as a man lighting a bomb under the United Nations.

The bomb carried a dollar sign and was labelled "temporary committee." (The United States has proposed the setting up of a year 'round committee of the U. N. General Assembly.) The explosive was depicted under a pillar called "principle of unanimity of the great powers."

Jerusalem Clashes Hint Showdown

Jerusalem, Oct. 26 (AP).—Two Jewish underground groups—the extremist Irgun Zvai Leumi and the more moderate Hagana—appared today to be preparing for a showdown.

After a night of minor clashes in the Tel Aviv area, the secret Irgun radio station accused members of Hagana of taking up arms "against your own people."

Hagana denied the charge that its members had fired first in the intercommunal dispute, but added: "We are doing all, and will do all, to prevent the distribution of Irgun Zvai Leumi pamphlets and posters undermining the discipline of national Jewish institutions."

The body of a Jewish policeman—shot through the chest—was reported found last night on a highway north of Gaza.

A report from Tel Aviv said furniture and apartments were demolished in fighting between Jewish groups in the southern suburbs of that city. Disorders continued today in Rehovotand Rishon le Zion, where the main clashes occurred last night.

streets of ruined villages and towns.

Today the Red Cross planned to serve 15,000 meals in Maine to the homeless and displaced persons—and fire fighters.

The latest blaze in Maine leveled 35 homes at Dayton village, but the flames were controlled after leaping the Saco River 5 miles west of the city of Saco, adjacent to industrial Biddeford.

Maine State police headquarters gave the following picture of the "live fire areas:"

Mount Desert Island (Bar Harbor, Northeast Harbor, Hulls Cove and Salisbury Cove)—Generally good.

Machias, Jonesbore, Rocque Bluffs—Very good. Fire under control.

Cherryfield—Good, unless wind changes.

Biddeford—Fires still burning on the southern approaches, but in hand.

Shapleigh—Fire out. Kennebunk—Under control.

Disaster Area

President Truman has proclaimed the entire State of Maine a disaster area. The fire scene stretches from the New Hampshire border at Berwick—where flames jumped the Salmon Falls River from Rochester, N. H.—to Cooper, near Calais, on the international boundary, more than 300 miles to the east.

"All out" aid, through utilization of surplus property, was assured the Pine Tree State by James P. Glynn, Federal Works Agency official, who rushed to the State capital at Augusta after the President's action.

From pulpits throughout Maine, clergymen of all faiths, who for days had fought alongside their flocks to save homes and churches, prayed for relief from the scourge of fire.

4 Seek Venezuelan Presidency on Dec. 14

Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 26 (AP).—Nomination of candidates by two major opposition parties assured today a four-way race for the presidency of Venezuela at the December 14 national elections. The president will be chosen by popular vote for the first time.

The conservative party COPEI (committee for independent electoral political organization) put up Dr. Rafael Calcera and the Democratic Republican Union Dr. Jovito Villalba. Previous nominees were Romulo Gallegos, candidate of the government party Accion Democratica, and Dr. Gustavoa Machado, Communist standard-bearer.

Miner Fete Set

Dean to End Long Career At College

Twenty-six years of active association with Miner Teachers College will end Friday for Mrs. Gertrude H. Woodard of 1232 Girard st. ne., dean of students.

Mrs. Woodward

In her honor, a testimonial and reception will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the school.

Mrs. Woodard, whose husband, Dr. W. Dudley Woodard, retired in June as head of the Howard University Mathematics Department, first went to Miner College as a home economics teacher in October, 1921.

In 1925, she was named dean of girls and, later, when enrollment of male students was stepped up, Mrs. Woodard was appointed dean of students. Officially, this occurred last year.

During her stay at Miner, Mrs. Woodard also served as a sociology teacher and as registrar.

A native of Alabama, Mrs. Woodard was educated at Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., where she received her bachelor's degree in 1903. In 1913, she received a master's degree from Columbia University.

Asked to comment on the changes in women students noted during her tenure, Mrs. Woodard would only say:

"The students have changed as the times have changed."

Dr. and Mrs. Woodard, who have one son, Dudley H. Woodard, a metallurgist for the Bureau of Standards, plan a trip to Mexico City November 1. Afterward, they plan to spend about seven months of the year in Chicago and the remainder at a country place in Pentwater, Mich.

"My husband will do the gardening and I'll cook—that's my hobby," Mrs. Woodard said.

Air Station. They shrugged their shoulders and referred him to Capt. Frederick Funke, jr., skipper of the Washington area reserve fliers. Sterling wrote Funke as follows:

"I don't mind the fact that Sunday services aren't worth attending because of the buzzing planes. The minister isn't very good anyway. I don't mind the fact that the planes made my stock unproductive and made me get rid of them—they weren't profitable either.

"But, when wobbly planes . . . make historic old Fenwick Freehold House the target for today at treetop and chimney height, making the curtains wave and my wife rave, making the house tremble and the servants shake, driving guests from the summer house and the cook from the kitchen and causing one of your own Navy fliers . . . to use language unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, then I do think I have a legitimate complaint.

"Please, before one of the chimney-grazers misjudges and takes us with him to a less noisy hell, can't you do something about it?"

Captain Funke immediately sent emissaries to talk to Sterling. They carried along a movie projector and films of carrier operations to prove that the low flying was not stunting, but serious training operations.

Peace negotiations were successful, Sterling and Funke report. The solution? The local airmen moved their aircraft carrier to another point on the field, which is approached from a different direction than Fenwick Freehold.

More On The Armory

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, has done his best to make emphatic his claim to revenue from nonmilitary uses of the Armory. But we cannot see that he has given his claim any substance. Unquestionably the National Guard has full control over the Armory so far as it needs that building for its own program. The District Commissioners have never disputed this. The huge drill hall was built, however, in the assumption that it would accommodate many athletic events and community activities without in any way interfering with the activities of the Guard. To assume that the Guard is to collect and divert to its own purposes the revenue from such use of the building seems to us fantastic.

The basic considerations, to our way of thinking, are these: The Armory was built and paid for by District taxpayers. Clearly it is their property. In 1944 Congress passed an act to give the District Commissioners additional authority, and one of the powers thus granted was that of entering into leases for the private use of District property when not needed for governmental purposes. That seems to fit the case of the Armory perfectly. A further indication of the intention of Congress can be found in the fact that it rejected the Guard's bid for control over the funds voted for maintenance of the building. This fund of $209,000 was taken out of the Guard's budget and placed in that of the superintendent of District buildings. It logically follows that the District should collect whatever revenue can be obtained from the drill hall, when it is not in use by the Guard, to help defray the cost of the building and its operation. That seems to us so utterly fair, in addition to being in accord with the law and sound practice, as to leave General Cox without a leg to stand on.

Our Export Outlook

Sir Stafford Cripps has banned further imports of American tobacco and intends to cut down food imports so as to save about 264 million dollars yearly. Coincident with this announcement comes word that Sweden is preparing to cut off imports of United States films, automobiles, nylons and plastics owing to near exhaustion of her foreign exchange and gold reserves. Thus the pressure to reduce buying of our goods is spreading from country to country and becoming intensified even while we are preparing to grapple with the problem of how to satisfy imperative foreign demands for basic foodstuffs and raw materials.

Appraisal of the outlook for our export trade and the effect of exporting upon our domestic economy and our price level must allow for these contrary developments. On the one hand we are faced by a shrinkage of foreign buying of various goods of a less essential nature; on the other hand, by an abnormally high demand (or rather need) for foods and other essential articles. Already complaints are arising about the price-depressing effect of the British tobacco ban on markets in which British buying has been heavy. At the same time the public is aroused by exorbitant wheat prices largely attributable to Government buying for export. Fortunately, the exportable items of which there is a world shortage, such as wheat, coal, steel and industrial machinery are, as the Krug report notes, limited in number, though, because of their importance in our economy, efforts to satisfy export demands create serious specific supply and price problems that call for careful planning.

Dollar savings effected by foreign countries through reduced buying of nonessentials—tobacco, for instance—will not relieve the pressure on our scarce resources or assist us to solve the physical as distinguished from the financial problems connected with foreign aid, although it is obviously desirable from the viewpoint of buying countries to effect such economies. There is good reason to conclude, however, that the enforced economies made necessary by world-wide dollar shortages will result in a general contraction of our export trade during the coming year, even if we advance large credits to finance essential purchases.

Thomas C. Blaisdell, Assistant to the Secretary of Commerce, is of the opinion that without further appropriations from Congress the drop in our exports from the level attained during the first half of 1947 "might be almost as sharp as the decline which occurred in 1921 in relation to 1920." In an article published by the New York Journal of Commerce, Mr. Blaisdell says: "While it is impossible to make any precise estimates in this difficult field, available information suggests that were additional foreign assistance of as much as five billion dollars to be made available for the placement of export orders in 1948, exports during that year will not reach the level of exports during the first half of 1947. Present indications are that the level might be as much as 10 to 20 per cent below that rate." If this forecast, based on certain informed assumptions, is correct, no general pressure on the price structure and no general material shortages because of our export program lie ahead. On the contrary, even with a fairly generous foreign aid plan a falling off in foreign buying of many categories of goods—hence relaxation of price pressure—is in prospect.

Ignorance Of History

The hundred teachers belonging to the Colorado Education Association who consented to participate in a quiz to test their knowledge of American history received an average grade below the passing mark. The majority didn't know the name of the president of the Confederate States. One teacher guessed that the Monroe Doctrine guaranteed equal rights to all. Another said that the United States acquired the Western States from Spain after the Spanish-American War, and about half the group thought that the Bill of Rights guarantees free education for all.

The patent absurdity of some of the answers betrays a depth of ignorance that cannot be excused. An intelligent person who had never so much as peeped into a history book would know enough to refrain from some of the wild guesses in which the teachers indulged. However, it is not surprising that the teachers proved to be woefully lacking in knowledge of certain elementary facts of our history. For a 1942 survey by the New York Times indicated that only 18 per cent of our colleges and universities then required the study of United States history as prerequisite to a degree and only 28 per cent required it for admission. Moreover, the percentage of college students taking American history courses was extremely small compared with those enrolled for courses in European and world history. In the high schools the teaching of history is, as a rule, to quote Secretary of State Marshall, a "routine performance" with undue emphasis on names and dates.

In his recent address at Lafayette College Secretary Marshall emphasized the crying need for improved methods of teaching history, particularly in the high schools. A date, however important, he said, is merely "an interesting fact" unless the person who has memorized that date appreciates its significance. We should amend this dictum by saying that an important date is not an interesting fact unless the student knows why it is important. The facts of history are, in short, a skeleton on which to hang the colorful events of the past. Mere facts have educational value only in giving the student a knowledge of what has happened and enabling him to link the past with the present and the future. That is the kind of historical perspective that a good teacher of history seeks to give his students.

There is no easy solution of the problem presented by deficient methods of history teaching in our schools and colleges. Instruction in history almost inevitably becomes little better than a dreary memory test unless the teacher has an extensive background knowledge and ability to fire the imagination of students. Our first task, therefore, is to make the facts of history meaningful for instructors themselves so that they may succeed in arousing the interest of students. That will be a difficult and time-consuming undertaking. But it is the only way of reforming teaching methods and translating routine information into a real understanding of the unique qualities of our political and social institutions.

We believe that the comparative neglect of American history by college and university students is largely due to a failure on the part of most instructors to infuse into their teaching the excitement and romance that make the history of the United States, if properly taught, one of the most thrilling chapters of world history. There is a wealth of relevant historical material in the form of biographies, personal narratives, books of travel and period pamphlets gathering dust in libraries that would satisfy the most avid reader of adventure tales. Reading of this kind would acquaint young people with the work and achievements of our great men, most of whom have been deprived of the attributes of our common humanity by our habit of accepting stereotyped judgments of their place in history. No doubt it is too much to expect that a majority of students will have both the time and the inclination to delve deeply into the books that make history come alive. But it is not too much to ask that the instructors of youth be equipped to introduce their students to such studies and to make courses in history preferred studies instead of dry-as-dust factual summaries.

He's Done It Again

Senator Bridges has done it again. Following his tactless comments on the delicate French political situation, he has called for an immediate halt to the dismantling of Germany's industrial plants for reparation purposes. The Senator says that it is "crazy to shovel out hundreds of millions on one hand and take out things which would permit the Germans to get on their feet." His views are shared by other critics of the program, including Kurt Schumacher, head of the German Social Democratic Party, who is now in this country. Mr. Schumacher protests that a majority of Germany's most modern and productive factories are included in the list of establishments to be dismantled. He says these factories are designed for the production of peacetime items, not military materiel.

This issue is one that should engage the attention of a Congress that is being called upon to vote millions for rehabilitation of western Europe. But the reparations problem has diplomatic as well as economic aspects; we are not the sole determinants of policy. Moreover, there is a proper time and place for all things. Neither the time nor the place selected by Senator Bridges for his announcement is fitting. He has needlessly affronted military officials in the occupied zone, creating the mistaken impression that he intended to demand the resignation of General Clay, and he has invited criticism of his own precipitancy in expressing an opinion before he has had opportunity to acquire on-the-spot information entitling him to pass judgment on the dismantling plan.

Communist Ban

Loud cheers greeted Robert Taylor's announcement to the House Committee on Un-American Activities that he'd "like to send all Communists back to Russia or some other unpleasant place." Even louder cheers greeted his expression of confidence that Communist ridicule would not injure him at the box office. We share his confidence that "the American people will go along with anyone who prefers the American system." But because we believe in the American system of government, which respects constitutionally guaranteed rights of free speech and freedom of opinion, we deplore the attitude of those who would deny the right of any minority to voice their political views, however abhorrent they may be to the majority of the people.

The strength of our democracy—indeed its ability to survive—lies in its willingness to tolerate and protect those who are foes as well as friends of the established order, provided, of course, the dissident elements obey the laws of the country. That spirit of tolerance is the acid test of our faith in the superiority and enduring quality of our political institutions. Even those faint-hearted believers in democracy who see no inconsistency in forcible suppression of those who preach revolutionary doctrines should realize the futility of trying to arrest the destructive march of communism by official banning of the Communist Party. The advocates of such policies certainly will receive no support from men who, like J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, have an intimate knowledge of the customary methods of Communist infiltration. When Mr. Hoover appeared before the House Committee on Un-American Activities last spring he expressed "great doubt" as to the wisdom of outlawing the Communist Party, since for every known Communist he figures that there are 10 fellow travelers ready to do the party work. While urging unrelenting prosecution of Communists who violate the laws, he said he would hate to see a Communist group "not deserving the category of martyrs made martyrs by some law which might later be declared unconstitutional."

In our opinion any such law would be declared unconstitutional. In any case it would serve no purpose except to advertise to the world that the United States is a country whose professions of belief in the value of free speech and freedom of opinion are not to be taken at face value. Instead of arresting the spread of communism, a repressive policy would advance the Communist cause by putting a weapon of attack in the hands of its disciples.

Prosecutor Vishinsky

It is becoming something of a badge of honor to be included in Andrei Vishinsky's list of warmongers. To an already imposing group of Americans he now has added such persons as former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Secretary of Defense Forrestal, Secretary of Commerce Harriman, and, curiously, such a publication as Successful Farming, whose offense lay in the publication of a hypothetical article, "Can Our Soil Win Another War?"

Mr. Vishinsky is taking a leaf from Mein Kampf's thesis that if a falsehood is big enough and repeated long enough, people will believe it. Indeed, it is not hard to visualize Mr. Vishinsky back in character as the prosecutor at the Moscow spy trials, with evidence no more genuine than that he used in 1938. As his previous tirades have shown, what Mr. Vishinsky wants, in calling for punishment of warmongers, is a law censoring the press and, actually, the utterances of individuals. It is disturbing to see the Australian delegate, Mr. Evatt, fall into the error of accepting part of Mr. Vishinsky's premise. Even though the Australian substitute resolution specifically exempts censorship of the press in calling on governments to promote "accurate reporting," how can a free government impose restraints of any sort without ultimately limiting free speech and free thought?

Mr. Vishinsky has just about completed the job of throwing away any good will that remained for Russia. The danger in his repeated defamations is that they will case-harden attitudes in this country and in effect accomplish precisely what Mr. Vishinsky condemns. In the meantime the propaganda must not put us on the defensive, but should produce a positive program of counter-propaganda on the nature of the American system in contrast to that of the Soviet system.

FULL MOON: REMEMBERED WARNING

Full moon above the quiet river, the marble city,
Gold over white.
No twinkling tower shows, no street or bridgeway
Patterned in light.
With helmet, torch and whistle the warden passes.
Drugged hours creep.
Like litters of fox and the mouse who huddle in darkness,
Man will not sleep.
What whisper tingles on the tongue? What word of horror
In warning?
Who is brash enough not to be thinking on the pale
Far sky of morning?
Suddenly, hark! Wild clamor of siren winding in moonlight,
Screaming,
"All clear! No plane of the enemy. Not tonight. Not tonight.
City go back to your dreaming."

Inter-Federation Report

In The Washington Post of October 21 there appeared an article dealing with Monday night's meeting of the Inter-Federation Council. It is the rule in this council that delegates representing the respective federations give reports of the past meetings of their bodies. In your report of the actions taken by the District of Columbia Federation of Citizens Association on the report of a special committee on the Community Chest, a sentence or two is quoted from my remarks, which, if unexplained, clearly gives the wrong impression of what I said.

I am reported to have said that the Washington Urban League is engaged in uplifting the colored race and then follows a statement which might give the impression that I believed this to be an undesirable thing. Of course no such idea was intended.

Any group of persons whose purposes are to uplift the colored or any other race is contributing to something worthwhile to the community, provided only that the method of "Uplift" is not repugnant to the majority of our citizens. The only issue discussed was whether the organization is properly included among the Community Chest agencies and not whether it was a desirable organization. On the question as to which organizations should compose the Washington Community Chest there is a difference of opinion, which I attempted to explain at the meeting referred to.

I want to make it plain that I did not criticize any organization as such. As to whether certain of them should be included in the Chest I have my own opinions. I was merely trying to explain the action taken by our Federation of Citizens Associations. The extracting of a few words from a report I made, giving to the public a wrong impression of the intentions of the speaker is just another example of the style of reporting which makes it difficult for anyone to discuss public questions without being put in a false light.

We have serious questions in this District which need sober and thoughtful consideration. Your paper is not assisting in settling them when you quote only a few words from my report and thereby give an entirely erroneous impression of the ideas I intended to convey.

Greek Supplies

Reading between the lines of the Associated Press dispatch from Athens regarding Dwight P. Griswold's announcement that the American Aid Mission had uncovered American supplies in Greece that were "deliberately held off the market to maintain high prices," I arrived at the conclusion that Mr. Griswold and his advisers as well as the half-baked "experts" on Greece in the Department of State are in complete darkness regarding the economic and political problems in Greece.

According to the dispatch, Griswold said that thousands of cartons of American cigarettes were found and indicated he believed these were kept off the market to maintain the price of Greek tobacco.

Well, what is wrong with that? Greece is a tobacco country. Hundreds of thousands of families in Greece depend on employment in the tobacco industry for a living. Moreover, sending tobacco or cigarettes to Greece is like sending coal to Newcastle. If anyone is to blame for this paradoxical shipment of unwanted goods to Greece, it should be the UNRRA or American "experts."

As for the other American material that remained unused in the warehouses, it probably consisted either of large, unwieldy farm tractors, totally unsuited to the agricultural needs of Greece (very small individual farms, mostly on steep hillsides, lack of gasoline, etc.), or heretofore completely unusable reconstruction material (you cannot use steel beams, say for bridge construction, without the proper machinery to cut, adjust and lift them), or medicine supplies utterly useless or unsuitable for the special needs of the unfortunate country.

Petrillo's Edict

Once upon a time there was an English King (Canute) whose subjects believed he could do anything he desired. The King, however, was a wise old soul who did not like to see his subjects so deceived. So, to prove he was not God, he gathered his subjects together on the seashore, and seating himself below the high tide mark he commanded the tide to stop.

A few days ago another king (Petrillo), who is not so wise as was King Canute, issued an order commanding the tide (of progress) to stop. But for the very same reason that we no longer have the Stone Age, and that the United States Government could not enforce prohibition, and that the Germans could not prevent an underground from operating, Petrillo will not stop for long the whole world from getting American-made records. People generally get what they want by hook or crook even though they are not wealthy enough "to pay for live music."

Petrillo's edict certainly proves rather conclusively that this Nation certainly needed a Taft-Hartley Act for the protection of workers and the public in general.

DP Experts

A professor of history at Fordham University has just conducted a survey in the camps in Europe to determine how many displaced persons might be available for teaching in a group of American colleges. He reports that there are hundreds of teachers, scientists, musicians, and architects who would have a great deal to offer to America were they given admission. This survey was only a scratching of the surface, inasmuch as he visited only a limited number of camps.

He suggests that our Government send a commission of, say, a dozen men, including a college professor, a medical doctor, a dentist, a mining engineer, an architect, a musician, etc., to survey the DP camps for people in the various professional fields. The commission would be empowered to decide whether a particular DP would be a national asset. A bureau on this side should be delegated the responsibility of listing communities, colleges, etc., willing to make bids for one or other of the DP experts.

Once a few thousand of these people had been admitted to serve American communities the general public would be more favorable to the idea of admitting DPs from all walks of life and the Stratton bill would be assured passage.

Seeing Red

This entire series of congressional investigations alarms me greatly.

I am not a member of the Communist Party, but I hate to see anyone or any group get a raw deal. I think there are many other organizations in this country more detrimental to American security and world peace than the Communist Party.

It is my suggestion to the Un-American Activities Committee to investigate the Cincinnati Reds, the Boston Red Sox and the St. Louis Cardinals while it is at it.

"Faith And Freedom"

I have read with great interest the letter written by Archbishop James H. Ryan of the National Catholic Welfare Council in response to your editorial, "Faith and Freedom," published October 17. It inspired me to turn to the record—the words of the Holy Father himself, Pope Leo XIII. Immortale Dei is not an obsolete encyclical. After re-reading it, carefully I concluded that Archbishop Ryan has been woefully misinformed.

Archbishop Ryan states, " . . . I have always supposed that a Nation-wide organization to insure the separation of church and state has existed since 1791." In that, he is quite correct: we have the Constitution of the United States. His "error" lies in his statement " . . . and Catholics accept now all the constitutional principles on which American democracy is based, including separation of church and state." I am surprised to put it mildly, that Archbishop Ryan does not know that such an acceptance is contrary and totally unacceptable to his church.

In commenting on the progress of free thought, free government, press, education and freedom of religion, Pope Leo XIII, in the above-mentioned encyclical, quoted Gregory XVI as follows:

"Nor can we hope for happier results either for religion or the civil government from the wishes of those who desire that the church be separated from the state and concord between the secular and ecclesiastical authority be dissolved. It is clear that these men who yearn for a shameless liberty live in dread of an agreement which has always been fraught with good and advantageous alike to sacred and civil interests."

Pope Leo justified these words of Gregory by stating, "To the like effect, also, as occasion presented itself, did Pius IX brand publicly many false opinions which were gaining ground and ordered them to be condemned in a summary form in order that in this sea of errors Catholics might have a light which they might safely follow." Pope Leo was referring to the famous Syllabus of Errors published in December, 1864, when our country was deadlocked in the throes of civil war.

Propositions xxxix and lv were cited as errors. The former reads, "The state, as the origin and source of all rights, enjoys a right that is unlimited." The latter, "The church must be separated from the state and the state from the church." It must be understood that these propositions are condemned to this day.

Perhaps Archbishop Ryan has not read the late Msgr. Ryan's book Church and State. Msgr. Ryan was in his day hailed as a great liberal. His denunciation of democracy is liberal and he offers no compunction for the dissolution of the Constitution of the United States.

I would suggest also that he read a pamphlet published by the Paulist Fathers on West 60th st., New York, entitled Freedom of Worship. The pamphlet, incidentally, bears the imprimatur of Archbishop (now Cardinal) Spellman. The position of the Roman Church on the proposition of separation of church and state is set forth in some detail and is plain enough for a child to understand.

ALBERT SCHWEITZER: THE MAN AND HIS MIND, by George Seaver. (Harper, $3.75.)

Mr. Seaver begins this biography with an assertion that "Albert Schweitzer is probably the most gifted genius of our age, as well as its most prophetic thinker." Not very long ago I heard from another source the same statement, minus the qualification, and I have been told that it recently has appeared (with photographs) in one of the most widely circulated of American weekly magazines. Thus it is with some embarrassment I confess that until Mr. Seaver's book fell into my hands I had not even heard of Dr. Schweitzer, but my ignorance appears to have been shared by the editors of most of the reference books to which I have an immediate access. I note, however, that British Who's Who devotes to him nearly three quarters of a column, most of it consisting of titles of his books. Anyway, I now learn that Dr. Schweitzer, now in his seventy-third year, is an Alsatian, that in his youth he was recognized as an organist of great talent, that he is considered the greatest living interpreter of the music of Bach, that he has been preoccupied from an early age with problems of philosophy and religion, that while still in his twenties he was made head of a theological college at Strasburg, from which he presently resigned in order to study medicine in order to become a missionary among the Negroes of French Equatorial Africa, and that he has remained in Africa ever since, save for occasional visits to Europe. Meanwhile, through his books, he seems to have exerted no little influence on the religious thought of his contemporaries.

As far as I can judge from the passages quoted by Mr. Seaver, Dr. Schweitzer's religious ideas have much in common with those of the late Baron von Hugel and with those aspects of the movement called modernism which were represented by the Abbe Loisy in France and by Father Tyrrell in England. Thus, as I gather, Dr. Schweitzer's Christology seeks to undertake the synthesis of Christianity and scientific criticism by a separation of the historical and the theological characters of Christ. He seems, like the modernists, to hold that the religion of the historical Christ, as it is disclosed in the Gospels, was essentially messianic and eschatological, that is, predicated upon an immediate expectation of the end of the world and the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven. Thus, in Schweitzer's view, Christianity could not have had the same connotation for the Apostles and the primitive church as for modern Christians for whom Christ is a power which, moving in the hearts of men, enables them to overcome self and the world. It is in the experience of this power, and not in historical evidences that what is "abiding and eternal in Jesus" is to be known. The teachings of the Gospels, although they are "based upon an eschatological world-view" which it is impossible for the modern mind to share, are nevertheless "appropriate to any world, for in every world they raise up the man who dares to meet their challenge, and does not turn and twist into meaninglessness." Here we seem to have an interesting rapprochement of mysticism and free-thinking, and Dr. Schweitzer abandons the dogmatic and redemptive elements in Christianity to emphasize its ethical meaning. For Dr. Schweitzer Christianity and ethics are indeed identical terms, and he defines ethics as the maintaining of life—all life—at its highest point of development through works of love. In this context the Kingdom of Heaven becomes something to be realized here upon earth, and of course the sooner the better. Thus he stands at an opposite extreme to the famous Karl Barth whose theology has put a literal emphasis on the text that the Kingdom is not of this world; indeed Dr. Schweitzer finds Barth and Nietzsche akin in their repudiation of reason and civilization.

Along with the dogmatic theology of Barth Dr. Schweitzer condemns, as destructive of ethics, the fashionable cults of scientific materialism and of pragmatism. The only ethic of which materialism is capable is the dictum that the individual should live for the community; but recent history has shown that the society has no need of the individual. Ethics, which are everything to Dr. Schweitzer, are impossible without sincerity; and pragmatism with its double standard of truth makes sincerity impossible. Classical ethics, as expounded by Plato and Aristotle, are bigoted, since they consider only Greeks and have no concern for barbarians and slaves. Even the universalist ethics of the Hebrew prophets and the Stoics are too narrow, since they do not extend beyond humanity. But the truly religious ethics extend, like St. Francis', to the whole of the animal creation, and indeed to plants and even to inanimate nature. "The man," says Dr. Schweitzer, "is truly ethical who shatters no ice crystal as it sparkles in the sun, tears no leaf from a tree, cuts no flower. . . . The farmer who has mown down a thousand flowers in his meadow to feed his cows, must be careful on his way home not to strike off in heedless pastime the head of a single flower by the roadside, for he thereby commits a wrong against life without being under pressure of necessity." And there are passages in which Dr. Schweitzer remembers with profound and touching sadness all the millions of bacteria that his ethical labors among the African tribesmen have obliged him to destroy.

Matter Of Fact

Getting Down To Business

TRIESTE, OCT. 26.—Trieste City lies below, cheerful and bustling in the early morning sun, yet crowded threateningly close by the encircling hills, beyond which lies Yugoslav territory. Here on these rocky heights runs the border between the Soviet and the Western Worlds. At the road block, two Yugoslav soldiers—Croat boys, sloppily dressed but heavily armed—lord it over a little group of peasants, and facing them are the young American troops, wonderfully smart and tough and so much bigger that they seem almost like giants, standing guard with the air of being ready for anything. This scene strikes the note of Trieste.

In all the rest of Europe, one traveler finds disaster visibly impending, while frantic American officials clutch the telegraph wires and send daily pleas to Washington not to be too little and too late for just this once. After repeatedly observing such depressing scenes, it is startling to come to Trieste, where everyone has got down to business and is briskly prepared to deal with any eventuality. The state of undeclared war which is at the root of Europe's ills has been frankly recognized here. The resulting clarity of political and strategic outline is a downright relief.

ANY REPORT on Trieste, however brief, would be incomplete if it did not begin by giving credit where credit is due. Trieste would already have been seized by the Yugoslavs, in gross violation of every treaty obligation, if it were not for the British and American commanders here, Maj. Gens. Terence Airey and Bryant Moore, and the remarkable group of British and Americans serving under them. These two men, their political advisers and their staffs, brilliantly checkmated the crude Yugoslav coup d'etat on September 15. But this is not all. They have also had the courage to interpret their rather vague directives with boldness and sound judgment in many other ways, so that underground as well as overt efforts to subjugate Trieste have been happily frustrated. For the present, at least, this is one situation which appears to be well in hand.

Nonetheless, Trieste poses an interesting and meaningful problem. It is a problem for the reason so succinctly given in State Department Planner George Kennan's admirable "Mr. X," article on Soviet-American relations. It proves, with finality, that there is no use making agreements or seeking agreements with the Soviets at the present juncture.

With agonizing difficulty, an agreement about Trieste was reached with the Soviets last year. The agreement was that Trieste should be free territory, with an impartial and independent governor approved by both sides. What has happened since? It has been proved impossible to appoint a governor, because the Soviets would accept none but a stooge guaranteed to hand the "free territory" over to Marshal Tito at the first opportunity.

The segment of the "free territory" beyond these hills which is garrisoned by Yugoslavs has already been transformed into a part of Yugoslavia. All opposition has been crushed out, by the simple system of slicing off any heads that stick up. The usual terror has given the Communist Party the usual firm grip on the area.

MEANWHILE, every effort is being made to infiltrate Trieste City, economically, by propaganda and by terror. As these words are written, in view of the brutal Communist kidnaping of the leading anti-Tito Slovene editor, Ursic, Generals Airey and Moore are being forced to tighten their police precautions. There is no other way to insure freedom of thought and speech, despite Foreign Minister Molotov's fine word and firm promises in Paris. Yet the Soviets would have the prize of Trieste within their hands tomorrow if any governor were now named and the British and American troops withdrew. These troops—this foreign occupation—now constitute the sole guaranty of the freedom of Trieste.

So long as Generals Airey and Moore are given the money, the food and the liberty of action to hold underground infiltration in check, and so long as the Kremlin wants no open war, these 10,000 British and American troops are guaranty enough. For obvious strategic and political reasons, the freedom of Trieste must be defended. Therefore, the British and American taxpayers should realize now that the occupation and the support of Trieste may have to continue for years. It may be expensive, but there is no use, any longer, pretending that unpleasing realities somehow can be wished or argued away.

Off The Record

plished much and continued his service at the meeting of the General Assembly in New York.

Our participation in the United Nations constantly and deliberately has been bipartisan. At both sessions of the General Assembly, our delegation included, in addition to Mr. Dulles, the top-ranking Democratic and Republican members of the Foreign Affairs Committee of both the Senate and the House, Senators Connally and Vandenberg and Representatives Bloom and Eaton. At the first session at London one of the delegates was my friend John G. Townsend, former Senator from Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, and a man respected by all Senators.

When Edward R. Stettinius resigned as head of the permanent delegation to the United Nations, I recommended to the President that he appoint the Vermont Republican, Senator Warren R. Austin, as chief of our permanent mission to the United Nations. The President was delighted with the suggestion. He liked Austin, having been closely associated with him in the Senate. Throughout his Senate carer Austin had shown an extensive knowledge of and a keen interest in foreign relations. He had made a great contribution to the success of the Chapultepec Conference and, in fact, since 1939, has cooperated wholeheartedly in the prosecution of the war and the preparations for the peace.

Praise for Senators

AFTER we agreed at Moscow to resume work on the preparation of peace treaties at Paris, I asked Senators Connally and Vandenberg to go with me as advisers. They generously agreed and served through the meetings of the Council and also during the peace conference. I discussed with them every phase of our foreign relations. In 1946 they spent 213 days away from Washington attending international conferences. No two legislators ever served their country more loyally or more efficiently than they did at those meetings.

Because Senator Vandenberg represented the political party opposed to the Administration, and because he enjoyed the confidence of the overwhelming majority of his party, his support enabled us to speak of our foreign policy as the American policy.

At the conference of the Council of Foreign Ministers each delegation has five seats at the table. Seated with me were the two Senators, the deputy in charge of the work on the treaty under discussion, and the interpreter. Each foreign minister can bring to the conference room an additional 8 or 10 members of his staff. It makes quite an audience. Consequently the ministers frequently hold private meetings in the hope that the absence of an audience may promote agreement. When these meetings are held each foreign minister is allowed to bring two associates in addition to the interpreter. To all such meetings, I asked the two Senators to accompany me. I preferred to have their counsel rather than the aid of the technicians of the State Department, as helpful as these gentlemen always were. Also, I wanted the Senators to know at first hand every stage of the treaty making.

Continuing Policy

THE POLITICAL party in power cannot ask the opposition party to share responsibility for the conduct of our foreign relations unless the leaders of the opposition are fully advised of our policies. This is true when the Congress and President are of the same party. It is particularly true when a majority of the Congress and the Chief Executive are not of the same political party. The executive branch of the Government cannot announce a policy of importance requiring congressional action and then inform the leaders of the opposition. Even if the opposition leaders think the proposal unwise they must support it or create abroad the impression of dissension. A policy of by-passing the Congress would make impossible a bipartisan policy.

While Senator Vandenberg and Senator Connally were with me, I sought their counsel not only on the treaties but on other matters connected with our foreign relations that were submitted to me by the department each day. They were helpful and, though I know they were frequently and skillfully tempted, not once did either of them give to newspaper friends advance information of our plans.

The participation of Senators Connally and Vandenberg in the meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers, the peace conference and the United Nations served to let the people of the world know that the foreign policy of the United States was a continuing policy and would not end with the defeat of a political party.

Mr. Byrnes was Secretary of State for a total of 562 days, 350 of which were passed at international conferences. In spite of this, he reorganized the Department of State, including many war-time agencies which were transferred to it and fought his political battles in Washington. One of the toughest of them came on his return from Moscow on December 29, 1945. A story was widely published that President Truman had summoned the Secretary of State to his boat on the Potomac and expressed strong disapproval of his work in Moscow. The story was untrue, but it was believed to have been inspired from inside the White House. Mr. Byrnes tells this story for the first time, naming names and citing the record, in the next installment of "Speaking Frankly" which will be published tomorrow.

Participation Gave Continuity Evidence

"The participation of Senators Connally and Vandenberg in the meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers, the peace conference and the United Nations served to let the people of the world know that the foreign policy of the United States was a continuing policy and would not end with the defeat of a political party."—From today's installment.

Placing Of Laid-Off To Be Speeded

LOOK FOR Civil Service to overhaul its program to find jobs for laid-off career people. The system takes too much time and effort although it has been successful in finding jobs.

Civil Service officials are now convinced they must have a system that will bring speedy and large-scale results. They now admit it will take months to make placements of the entire group of jobless people under the present system.

About 350 people have been placed in jobs here in the four weeks the program has been effective. But the number to be placed is still around 1900 since new applicants have just about offset the placements.

In these four weeks, Civil Service has given the agencies quotas of accountants, auditors, economists, statisticians, and a few specialized administrative people to place. Officials emphasized that they won't backtrack on these quotas.

However, it's likely that some system of mass quotas will be used to get jobs for the remainder. The mass quota would give the agencies a chance to promptly consider the hiring of all types of employes on the career list. Otherwise, it would be months before the agencies would be asked to hire some types of people under the present specialized quota system.

Overall, the Civil Service record of placing jobless career employes is very good. A total of 6290 has been placed the country-over. In addition, 1144 won appeals from the commission and they were restored to their jobs. This record gives the career service a real meaning.

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: The Federal Personnel Council has rejected one change proposed by Civil Service in the efficiency rating system. The commission recommended that any employe who is transferred to another job be given a "provisional" rating of good when he takes his new job.

The council insisted that the transferred employe be permitted to retain his present rating until he's rated on his new job. The commission will withdraw its recommendation.

However, the council indicated approval of the commission plan to give an advance warning to laggard employes before they can be rated fair or unsatisfactory. This proposal also provides for the supervisor to tell the employe how he can improve his work.

Under it, any employe could be rated either unsatisfactory or fair at any time, provided he's warned at least 60 days in advance. Ratings can now be made only once a year. An unsatisfactory or fair rating requires the employe to be fired or demoted.

COMING EXAMS: Civil Service soon will announce a test for physical therapist jobs in veterans' hospitals. About 500 jobs are open. They pay from $2644 to $5905 to start. . . . A second new test will be for tobacco inspector jobs to pay from $2168 to $4149 to start. . . . The 1000 persons in this area who applied of the telephone operator test will be examined November 9 at the McKinley High School here. About the same number applied for the test outside of Washington.

APPROVAL: Civil Service has indorsed a Senate bill which would require Federal agencies to give leave without pay to its employes who want to attend school under the GI Bill of Rights. It made known its views is a letter to the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

The agencies now have the authority to grant leave to veterans who wish to attend school. However, some of them have refused to grant it unless the veterans take courses in line with the type of work they are performing.

Civil Service also approved another bill which would permit veterans on leave to take temporary or part-time work in other Federal agencies. Such employment is now prohibited by law.

WAR: Its Quartermaster General is hiring CAF-3 stenographers. Apply to Room 1-1007 in Tempo A Building, 2d and T sts. sw., or call Republic 6700, Branch 71768 for further information.

RULING: Employes who are on furlough because of a reduction in force and who enter the military service may be either restored to civilian jobs or else be given furlough status when they are honorably discharged. This ruling has been made by Civil Service.

ATC: Miss Headquarters, Air Transport Command, will be selected at a dance Friday night from these finalists: Bette Lou Callen, Nancy Medlin, Louise Cashion, Bernice Gordon, and Terry Carroll.

VETERANS: Civil Service has rejected a request that it seek a ruling from the Attorney General on preference for disabled veterans who have a disability of less than 10 per cent. The commission prefers to give Congress a chance to settle this question. The Senate already has passed a bill that would limit 10-point preference to disabled veterans who have a service-connected disability of more than 10 per cent. The House will take up the bill.

MEETING: The executive board of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks is meeting here this week to make plans for a pay-raise drive when Congress returns.

The Special Session

By Mark Sullivan

What Will Be Asked Of Congress?

THE DAYS SINCE President Truman announced the calling of a special session of Congress for November 17 have thrown some light on future developments, though much remains to be seen. For complete light it will be necessary to wait until the President sends his concrete recommendations to Congress.

In speaking about these Mr. Truman made a distinction between the two purposes of the special session and his attitude toward each. As to one of the purposes he said, "I shall recommend a program dealing with inflation, high prices, and the high cost of living." But as to the other purpose, foreign aid, the President did not suggest he would recommend a specific program to Congress; he rather pointedly indicated that he would not. He called attention to the emergency but left the details of solution up to Congress.

WHATEVER THE REASON, and whatever the weight it may have, Washington is convinced that the Administration has come to the conscious conclusion not to lay before Congress a blueprint of foreign aid and the many and intricate conditions that go with it. Some developments, following Mr. Truman's announcement and increasing the impression it made, have given rise to a feeling in Washington that the Administration is consciously avoiding responsibility for a comprehensive program about foreign aid, and is leaving that responsibility up to Congress.

Foreign aid includes much more than the amounts of money involved. There are many questions of policy and method. Is our aid to be a gift or a loan? Is aid for industrial reconstruction in Europe to be given to governments as governments and left for them to distribute, or is it to be channeled by us to the beneficiaries of it? Is all the aid to come out of our Treasury and from our taxpayers, or is some of it to be provided by semigovernmental banks, such as the World Bank, or private banks or private industries? Should we make any stipulations about how the funds are spent?

These and many other questions of policy and method are to be left up to Congress, and not presented to Congress by the President as a packaged program. The impression that the President would make a comprehensive recommendation to Congress was created by the fact that the preliminaries looking to foreign aid have been conducted by the Administration. The Marshall Plan came from the Secretary of State. The inventory of our resources to determine how much we could safely afford was made by a committee headed by Secretary of Interior Krug. Other preparatory work was done by a committee headed by Secretary of Commerce Harriman.

ALL THIS may have created an impression that the President would recommend to Congress a program about foreign aid, as apparently he intends about inflation and high prices. But in fact the preparatory work is the function of the Administration. The writing and enactment of a program, which uses the preliminary work as information, is the function of Congress. It goes with that body's supreme power, the control of the purse. For writing the program, Congress has first-hand information acquired by its own members. Upward of 200 Senators and Representatives have been in Europe this fall and summer for the specific purpose of equipping Congress with information about the conditions in Europe having to do with aid by us. It is out of Congress that the country will receive information about coming developments in foreign aid.

As to the other purpose of the special session of Congress, high prices and inflation, the President said he will "recommend a program." That program will be watched to see whether it includes any proposal about Government support of the prices of farm products, food. The Government has on hand immense quantities of farm products, bought for the purpose of supporting prices. That this is an essential factor in the present high level goes without saying. Any program about high prices and inflation which omits mention of this would hardly be convincing.

6251 Bodies of First War Dead From Europe Arrive in N. Y.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—New York paid silent tribute to the fallen GIs of World War II today as the transport Joseph V. Connolly arrived with the bodies of 6251 war dead from military cemeteries in Europe and Newfoundland.

The transport slid into the muted harbor after a rendezvous near the entrance with two destroyers which strewed floral pieces on the water after a brief religious ceremony honoring the first group of war dead to be returned from Europe.

The flag-draped casket of a Congressional Medal of Honor winner, chosen by the War Department as the symbol of his fellows and whose identity will not be made public, rested on the boat deck of the transport behind the pilot house, which was covered with black wreaths.

A guard of honor stood at the casket and bluejackets on the destroyers lined the rails at attention as Army and Navy installations in the harbor fired 21-gun salutes and war planes roared overhead.

Liner Bastogne Dips Flag

The outbound Belgian liner Bastogne, named after the town in which the 101st Airborne Division was surrounded by the Germans during the Battle of the Bulge and where many of the Connolly's dead fell, dipped its flag in salute as it passed the marine cortege.

After another brief ceremony when the transport docked, the body of the fallen hero was borne from the ship by pallbearers representing all of the armed services and placed on a caisson which was drawn by an armored car up 5th ave. to Central Park for memorial services.

The caisson was preceded by detachments from the United States Military and Naval Academies, the Eighty-second Airborne Division, the Third Cavalry from Fort Meade, Md., and other units of the armed forces. Thousands lined the streets with bared heads. A halt was made at the Eternal Light in Madison Square, a memorial to World War I dead.

Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, commanding general of the First Army and grand marshal of the procession, left the line of march to place a wreath of laurel and palm at the base of the monument.

Church bells tolled a mournful dirge as the cortege moved up 5th ave. past St. Patrick's Cathedral, where Francis Cardinal Spellman and other church dignitaries stood on the steps, their heads uncovered.

Cortege Proceeds Silently

Some bands played during the march, but for long periods there was only the sound of leather against asphalt and the muffled beat of drums as the cortege continued up Fifth Avenue to 72d st. and then to the sheep meadow in Central Park.

Behind the caisson marched Mayor O'Dwyer of New York and city officials, followed by detachments from the Police, Fire and Sanitation Departments and delegations from veterans' organizations.

At Central Park, pallbearers carried the coffin to a catafalque. Catholic, Protestant and Jewish chaplains participated in the memorial ceremony.

A 21-shot salute was fired from a grove near the meadow as the caisson arrived with the body. Hundreds of men and women wept.

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall represented the Nation, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, New York, and Mayor William O'Owyer, the city. Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, who placed a wreath on the coffin, and delegations from the United Nations were in the speakers' stand.

Royall declared in an address that "many a one who died must have known that his death would not have come if America had been realistic . . . this young man whom we honor—he and his brothers in arms, living and dead—are looking to you to maintain the peace with realism.

"They are expecting America to face the world—in one hand an olive branch of peace, and in the other a shield of power."

Wife of Bao Dai To Confer With French

Hongkong, Oct. 26 (AP).—The wife of Bao Dai, abdicated Emperor of Annam, left for Paris today, reportedly to enter negotiations for the independence of Indo-China. The French want Bao to return to Indo-China.

While the former emperor has indicated a willingness to work with the French to end the fighting in Indo-China, it was reported he would serve under the French only if their program leads to independence. Annam is one of the major states which make up Indo-China.

Austrian Party Leader Presses Big 4 Treaty

Vienna, Oct. 26 (AP).—Julius Deutsch, a leading Austrian Socialist, declared today that if the Big Four powers are unable to agree on an Austrian treaty, his country would be "regretfully forced" to sign separate treaties with countries so desiring.

He told delegates to the party's annual convention that Austria must maintain a policy of strict neutrality toward both the east and west.

The Citizen Before Congress

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, has sent the following letter to the Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, the President Pro Tempore of the U.S. Senate, and the Majority and Minority leaders of the Senate and the House

THE purpose of this letter is to suggest that the time has come for the Congress to overhaul its procedure in committee investigations to clarify and make secure the rights of individual citizens.

In my opinion, the broad power of the Congress to investigate is among the great sentinels of the public welfare. In no other way can corruption be so effectively exposed or facts so adequately marshaled as a basis for needful legislation. No thinking person would question the right of the Congress to investigate.

I merely raise here the serious question of evils inherent in the existing procedure of investigating committees. The procedure lacks uniformity; it has developed more or less haphazardly. It can and sometimes does deny the individual his full measure of citizenship rights.

Too often, individuals and institutions have been condemned without a hearing or a chance to speak in self-defense; slandered and libeled by hostile witnesses not subject to cross-examination and immune from subsequent suit or prosecution. Legal counsel cannot be heard except at the committee's pleasure. Too often this protection is limited to advice on constitutional rights. The committee can accept or reject explanatory statements for the record.

Today, the motion picture industry, a part of which I represent, is under investigation by the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives. Its procedure, good and bad, is the common practice of all investigating committees. The present investigation serves to emphasize my thinking on the need for reform.

I am thoroughly aware that a Congressional investigation is a fact-finding inquiry and not a trial; that a committee is neither a prosecutor nor a court; that it neither indicts nor convicts. But in practice, the committee becomes prosecutor, judge, and jury, and the individual becomes the defendant.

With no vested right to be heard and no vested right to challenge accusations against him, the innocent citizen is helpless. He can be indicted and convicted in the public mind on the unchallenged say-so of a witness who may be completely sincere, but can be either misinformed or riddled with prejudice. Without fear of reprisal, a prejudiced witness can exercise venom as well as veracity.

The time to challenge an attack or a misrepresentation is at the hour it is made. The longer the delay, the greater the damage.

In America, we hold that the individual is a higher power than the state which derives from him its own authority and must treat him accordingly. The sovereign rights and dignity of the individual supersede all else. There is no place in our society for any procedure or practice which cuts away part of those rights. There can be no such thing in America as a half-citizen.

One of the most precious heritages of our civilization is the concept that a man is innocent until he is proved guilty. This concept is so dear to us that we say it is better for twelve guilty men to escape than for one innocent man to suffer.

This is in direct contradiction to the practice of the police state. In Russia, the state has all the rights, and the individual has none. There a man is guilty until he proves his innocence, and too often innocent men are condemned before a guilty one is found.

We surround our defendants in courts of law with a multitude of protective devices. To name but a few—

We assign them counsel when they cannot themselves afford it; they have the right of cross-examination; prospective jurors can be challenged; and the judge himself can be disqualified on grounds of prejudice.

These protections and safeguards are denied or short-circuited in Congressional inquiries.

I do not suggest that investigating committees adopt and pursue the procedure of the courts. We cannot expect the identical procedure of a court of law and accomplish the purpose of a Congressional investigation.

I am suggesting only that there are too many weaknesses and evils in present procedure. I am proposing a fresh look as a basis for reform. Besides the right of the individual, there is another vital factor. Whenever a Congressional committee in its effort to expose or develop facts has injured an innocent individual, it has injured itself more. The entire institution of the Congress suffers. We arm the advocates of paternalism and the police state and undermine the legislative system.

Congress, the representative body of the people, must be scrupulous in its relationship with the people, and as an institution must be at all times above reproach.

Today, the individual is crushed in many lands. The eyes of the people of the world who want liberty and freedom look to America as the last hope and the last refuge of free and dignified men.

Congress must take positive action to reemphasize the rights of man, the citizen.

Eric Johnston

UPWA Insurgents Launch 'Red' Drive

40 'Progressives' Organize Here, Frame Program Aimed to Oust Union Leaders

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

A group of "progressives" within the United Public Workers of America yesterday formed a "build the union" committee that plans to unseat present UPWA leaders for alleged Communist policies.

The 40-odd insurgents gathered here from locals in Washington and other cities for a two-day conference.

After a final meeting last night, they issued a policy statement on which they based the hope of rallying sufficient support among UPWA's claimed membership of about 86,000 to oust President Abram Flaxer and others by next spring's convention.

"The present leadership," the "night-wingers" declared, "has frequently attempted to link our union with outside organizations which have been disapproved by the CIO."

Laying the blame "squarely with the top leadership," the policy statement charged that the UPWA has been losing membership in "a steady stream," despite "the great need for organization" among the country's public workers."

Replying to this charge, UPWA leaders have pointed to a report by CIO President Philip Murray at the recent Boston convention crediting UPWA with a gain of some 12,000 members in the last year.

Robert Halbeisen, of Michigan's Local 191, who was elected chairman of the "build the union" committee, told reporters he could not estimate how many UPWA members his group might represent, but said there were "many."

Larry Kammet, UPWA publicity director, numbered them at a "few," terming the conference group "disgruntled office seekers who had been repudiated by the membership."

Specifically, the new committee's program called for (1) election of national officers by referendum, instead of through delegates to the convention; (2) a graduated dues scale, to lighten the financial burden on low income employes, and (3) reversal of the UPWA foreign policy resolution, allegedly pro-Soviet and adopted by the 1946 convention.

Other officers of the insurgent committee are William McHugh, of the Detroit State CIO Council, vice chairman, and Rose Fox of Local 3, corresponding secretary; Richard Shoemaker, Local 10, financial secretary, and Margaret Plunkett, Local 10, public relations officer, all of Washington. A four-man advisory committee also was named.

K St. Has a Geyser All Its Own

The Washington Post

WHOOSH!—Geyser erupts at the intersection of 9th and K sts. nw., as workmen clean the interior of a 30-inch water main running from Massachusetts ave. to New Jersey ave. nw. A cleaning machine, built to fit inside the pipe and carrying steel scraper blades, is forced through the main by water pressure

Spectators who wondered what all the gushing was about yesterday at 9th and K sts. nw. may be interested to know they were watching the end play of a very practical job called "chasing the rabbit."

The gushings, of murky waters, preceded "the rabbit," an oversize, water-driven pipe cleaner being used to clear 87 years of rust and sludge from a 30-inch water main.

Cearing of the line, first laid in 1860, was accomplished by forcing "the rabbit," a six-foot, six-bladed rotary scraper through the pipe from a cut made at Massachusetts and New Jersey aves. nw.

Older Mains Cleaned

Water Division Superintendent David V. Auld explained that the District has been cleaning out the older mains over a period of about five years, a process preliminary to lining the cast iron pipes with concrete. It will take four or five more years to complete the program, he said.

The scraper, consisting of a rigid stem with metal diaphragms or rings held outstretched by stiff springs,—was placed in the main at the east cut while the water was turned off. At the other end, sandbags surrounded the outlet at K st. Walkie-talkie communication warned workers at the outlet at 7:30 a. m. that the water had been turned off.

Tons of Gritty Rust

The first surge of water produced a man-sized geyser at the K and 9th st. outlet, and a gang of brush-wielders kept the murky liquid in check and flowing down the street drains. At 7000 or 8000 gallons a minute, the water, flowing ahead of the "rabbit," brought several tons of gritty rust particles to the surface.

While the "rabbit" arrived at the outlet in 52 minutes on the first "shot" sent through in the early morning, a second "shot" made at about 11:30 a. m., to complete the cleaning, was unfinished last night.

Editors Hit 'Gag' Rule in Security Plan

Cleveland, Oct. 26 (AP).—Directors of the American Society of Newspaper Editors today denounced an attempt to implement the President's loyalty order of last March with directives which the editors said "would place even the ordinary affairs of Federal civilian agencies beyond public scrutiny."

Concluding a two-day meeting, the ASNE board passed a resolution opposing security regulations prepared by the Security Advisory Board.

These regulations, the resolution said, already are embodied in a directive for guidance of the Veterans' Administration and that directive "evdently is a pattern for directives to be issued to other Federal agencies."

The language of the directive "could be used to deprive the public of information to which it is entitled," the resolution went on. "While the announced purpose of the President's loyalty order is to protect the Nation in the difficult international situation which now exists, the VA directive classes as confidential information which does not affect the national security."

Without questioning the purpose of the President's loyalty order, the board urged the President "to nullify the VA gag rule and to strike any such rule out of the regulations for other departments."

The directors today elected to ASNE membership under the distinguished service to journalism clause in the society's constitution, Roscoe Drummond, Washington correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor; Arthus Krock, New York Times Washington correspondent; and Walter Lippmann of the New York Herald-Tribune.

D. C. Tax Bureau Sees Busy Day With Delinquents

The District's delinquent tax section may be busier than usual today—and Samuel J. Kidd, section chief, hopes it is.

For that would prove that the announced seizure of properties and money to reimburse the District for back taxes will have had the desired effect of making people hurry on down to pay up.

Yesterday, Kidd said plans are in readiness for his five investigators to make trips to banks early today with formal seizure notices against the bank accounts of delinquent taxpayers. Most of the tax arrears involve personal property, but a few are income and estate taxes, he said.

Public announcement of the seizure plan in the past years has brought the section so much business that last year only 360 seizures were necessary, Kidd said.

Chevy Chase Methodist Fund Tops $100,000

Contributions of more than $15,000 received yesterday brought the Chevy Chase Methodist Building Fund drive over its $100,000 mark, it was announced by Dr. Homer Clifford Richmond, pastor.

The new building, on which construction is expected to begin next spring, will cost $275,000. William L. Orem, jr., is building committee chairman, and Karl Plitt heads the current drive.

Good Idea Gone Wrong

'Wild Harvest' Has A Unique Setting

By Richard L. Coe

A FRESH AND FASCINATING setting is put to disappointing use in "Wild Harvest," now at the Warner.

The setting is the wheat belt; the characters are the men who roam from Texas to Canada each summer with their "combo" machines that harvest machine-age grain.

Originally this project was titled "The Big Haircut," but just as the imagination of John Monks, jr., failed him in evolving a worthwhile story, so, too, Paramount gave up its title for something more obvious.

Alan Ladd, Robert Preston and Lloyd Nolan portray three tough guys who've palled together before on other he-man adventures—engineering and the like. When the film opens, Ladd has gotten interested in making some money from the big "combo" machines and has gotten together a crew. Preston comes back to the fold with a handy bankroll and the men start their trek.

But men without women in the movies are unthinkable. So it's little surprise that when Ladd knocks on a farmhouse door, who should open it but Dorothy Lamour—the farmer's niece. From here on it's the familiar story line of Sergeant Quirt and Captain Flagg, fighting for the dishonor of a lady.

She's No Lady

She is not, to be sure, a lady in any sense of the word. Because Ladd won't give her a tumble, she marries Preston, so expert a mechanic that the crew allows him to break their rule of "no women folks allowed." She prods him into stealing a percentage of wheat from every acre harvested. The crew has to make for the border, which it does in a truck chase that's no different from all the chases of the silent days.

As in "What Price Glory?" Ladd and Preston battle over Miss Lamour, but ultimately leave her to her own devices and, presumably, hit the road again on the way to Nebraska and the North.

Certainly there is fine picture material in this little known aspect of American life. And it won't be beyond some people to read pinkish tinge into Ladd's reply to a remark about free enterprise—"Nothing's free." What he's calling for when he says it is not communism, but team work, between which terms the contemporary scene is now having such trouble differentiating.

Indeed, one could almost imagine that fear of being called a "pinko" is what kept Monks from making the most of his unique material. Migratory workers are certainly a part of the American scene, but unless one is careful one might be accused of being "un-American" to say so.

Idea Falls Apart

Hence, the familiar triangle business, the rough and tumble "boys-will-be-boys" spirit that so defeats the picture. "Wild Harvest," alas, begins as an idea, but before it's well under way falls apart into a mess of melodrama and comedy, neither of which is good melodrama or comedy.

The playing is able, particularly Preston, who's getting to be rather like a young Gable, jaunty, selfish, fond of the gals, but reliable in the pinch. Ladd battles with the recklessness his audiences have come to demand and Lloyd Nolan's sardonic humor is good. There's nothing much wrong with Miss Lamour except her role, which includes several scenes that are laughable, unintentionally one presumes.

The Warner screen also offers a short, "So You're Going on Vacation," and an amusing "Rhapsody in Rivets," in which you'll find a construction foreman building a skyscraper with the technique of a symphony conductor.

"WILD HARVEST." Paramount Release produced by Robert Fellows. Screenplay by John Monks, jr., directed by Tay Garnett. At the Warner.

Operetta at the National

Lehar's Tuneful Merry Widow Remains Pleasurable Listening

We're happy to report that "The Merry Widow" is a pleasure at the National. Yesterday afternoon's opening found little comparison between the Lehar operetta and the same group's abysmal "Rose Marie" of last week.

In the first place Lehar's lovely, lilting tunes have a vigor and charm that have kept their vitality fresh since 1905. The Widow and Prince Danilo are in other hands than last week's leads, the staging is considerably better and, to repeat, "The Merry Widow" is not "Rose Marje."

Lehar's magic has made its unnecessary to insert extraneous tunes (at least not much more than one) as was the case with Friml's score. The haunting waltz, "Maxim's," "Vilia," "Women" and "I Love You So," are all songs in the best of their genre. And an afternoon spent listening to them can be a pleasure.

And the House Liked It!

Beverly Sills, who has the charmingly curved figure associated with that period and increasingly with The New Look, sings The Widow effectively. Frank Melton gives an appropriately limp air to Danilo and does well enough with his songs. The staging is far more fluid and the general effect obviously delighted the opening audience, which, again, is far more than you could say for the listless reception accorded "Rose Marie."

This is not to say that here is the finest possible performance of "The Merry Widow." The important words of the songs do not carry over clearly. Despite all the shouting one may hear that our musicals of recent years are revolutionary in that the songs are part of the plot, a visit to Lehar's operetta disproves this. Most of the songs and ensemble numbers are decidedly a part of the story and in the ideal production every word would be distinct. Surely this is something the present company could improve on.

True, the plot may not impress you as great stuff, but it has a fairy-tale charm about it which assured grace could bring out. The ventures into comedy, as with all operetta revivals, are disastrously painful though Nina Olivette's bull-dozer approach to it is far more successful than her associates'.

Except for the team of Gilrone and Starr, the dancing is completely uninspired, though, thank heavens, it lacks the utter absurdities of last week's "Totem" number. The settings, particularly Act I, suggest that stage design has not advanced a whit since 1905.

No, neither the National nor Correspondent John H. MacClane, who differed with our "Rose Marie" impressions, has a pistol at our head as we write this. What's beguiled us are Lehar's memorable tunes — da-da-dah-da-da-dum-da-dee.

Hippodrome's Double Bill

'Carnival of Sinners' Depicts A Poor Painter and the Devil

By Leo Brady

The devil, who appears as a sniggering little man in a black suit in one of the films at the Hippodrome this week, doesn't mention instituting the double feature. But it seems likely that he did. It was either him or some other totalitarian, in an effort to attack both films and American sanity.

The effect of teaming up "Carnival of Sinners" and "Poil de Carotte" on the Hippodrome screen is that they considerably weaken each other, but for what my testimony is worth, after three hours of watching, I have the feeling that either one of them is worth seeing individually. They are by no means great pictures, whether French or otherwise, but they are both sensibly and imaginatively made, they unreel interesting stories, they are alert to camera values, and they are admirably paced.

"Carnival of Sinners" is the more theatrical and the more enjoyable. Pierre Frensay, an actor of energy and impact, plays a mediocre painter who trades his soul to the devil in return for fame and money. He comes by this bargain in the form of a boxed hand which he buys from a chef—yep, a real, five-fingered hand, all detached and active in a package—like Gaugin's ear.

The work he produces as a result of this exchange is weird and haunting and you get only a couple of looks at it over the devil's shoulder. Like Faust and Daniel Webster's farmer friend, the painter repents of his bargain and spends three rather flamboyant reels getting back to virtue. The tale is told nicely in terms of moods and backgrounds and though it tends to go a bit bizarre, it is consistently engrossing and—a couple of times—gripping.

"Poil de Carotte" looked to me for one terrifying minute like another sequence out of "Les Miserables"—there was Harry Baur about to be elected mayor and there was a browbeaten little child. But it turned out to be a fairly sentimental and somewhat overloaded story of a redheaded, freckled kid, who was born in the twilight of his parents' life and had a difficult time getting them to adjust him. The boy himself is immensely appealing and his attempt to hang himself will give you a couple of gulps.

Otherwise, the story tends to back-track on itself near the end and rehearse the same material without sufficient variation. I'm afraid it's mawkish overall, but it has some rewarding moments and at the end the little boy says: "Fathers should be good fathers and mothers should be good mothers" a sentiment that I am sure everyone—including Tiny Tim—will agree with.

Like a club sandwich, this double-billing is hard to take, but the ingredients are perfectly satisfactory. Also, the projectionists at the Hippodrome have two of the best voices in town.

"CARNIVAL OF SINNERS." Distinguished Films release. Produced and directed by Maurice Tourneur. Screenplay by Jean-Paul Le Chanois. Music by Roger Dumas. English titles by Charles Clement.

Takoma Park Fire Fighters Board Planned

Legislation to create a special board to operate the Takoma Park Fire Department will be sought at this fall's special session of the Maryland General Assembly.

Corporation Counsel J. Douglas Bradshaw, it was learned yesterday, has been designated to draft the legislation, which, if passed, will put the department's five paid employes on the town payroll.

Norman C. Jones, fire department president, said yesterday the firemen favor the plan and that it has been agreed to "in principle" by members of the town council.

The firemen believe, Jones said, that if relieved of the necessity of raising funds for the department's operation they can devote their full time to improving fire fighting and fire prevention methods.

An increase in the fire tax rate of the ninth and twenty-second precincts which are outside the town limits from 6 to 10 cents per $100 valuation is contemplated as part of the program. The town fire tax rate now is 15 cents per $100.

Under present operation, the fire tax money is paid the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, a private organization. Under the proposed plan, a fire board made up of representatives of both the fire department and the town council would handle the department's operation and finances.

Antiques Exhibit Offers Items High in Interest and Value

You can take your pick of "old things" at the Statler.

Such rare and interesting items as a fourteenth century musical manuscript, a map of America in 1626, a painting on hand-loomed paper from the late seventeenth century, are featured at an exposition of antiques which opened yesterday.

Interested in a rare Queen Anne highboard? You can buy one there for $900.

Or how about a tea service for 8, including cups without handles and saucers? It dates back 175 years and costs—$300.

Lafayette's visit in 1824 is commemorated on a pitcher, on sale in the Presidential Room for $95.

There's an American banjo clock, made around 1820, which depicts the battle between the Constitution and the Guerriere, during the War of 1812.

The map of America dated 1626 shows California as an island; San Francisco is called "Port S. Francisco Drake," and Washington, as you might have guessed, doesn't appear at all.

One booth exhibits a pair of patent leather woman's shoes, which button several inches above the ankle and point—but sharply.

Other items include a gilt spoon available for $25, a pair of Chinese, hand-embroidered wall hangings, valued at $600 apiece, and musical manuscripts said to date from the fourteenth century.

Mrs. John Freeman Brown is sponsoring the exposition, which will run from 11 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. through Friday.

Women Fur-Wearers Can Thank Russians

Ketchikan, Alaska, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—American women can thank a Russian "invasion" for low prices on furs this year, Charles Goldstein, recognized authority on the fur market, told the Ketchikan Daily News today.

Goldstein, pioneer fur dealer with headquarters in Juneau, said thousands of fox lynx sable and martin pelts shipped to the United States by Russia in recent months are responsible for a poor fur market. Price of silver fox is down from $60 to $20 and on white fox from $20 to $9, Goldstein said.

Imperial Jap Princes Bid Cousins 'Farewell'

Tokyo, Oct. 26 (AP).—Crown Prince Akihito, his brother Masahito and their three sisters, were hosts today at a "farewell" tea party for some 40 of the younger generation of imperial princes and princesses who have been shorn of their rank.

Hereafter they will be unable to meet on equal footing, since all except the royal family have become commoners.

Record 36,591 See Bears Thrash Redskins, 56 to 20

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Oct. 26.—The sun is out, and so are more persons than have ever before witnessed any kind of a sports event in Washington. For this Redskin-Bears game, the attendance is announced as 36,591 net paid, not including the Redskin coaches, the press, the players and the telephone maintenance crews.

POVICH

The Bears win the toss and elect to receive, on the profound theory that Sammy Baugh can throw no touchdown passes when the Bears have the ball. That's the kind of thinking that has won the Bears more championships than any other club.

George McAfee goes 19 yards with a Sid Luckman pass, before he is tackled by Wilbur Moore, who acts as if he wants to go steady with McAfee. He embraced McAfee on the 19-yard line, got a free ride to the Redskins' 10.

A Bears. It took 'em 7½ minutes to get the first touchdown, after the field judge horned into the play with a ruling that Tom Farmer interfered with a pass to Keane on the Redskins one-yard line. Hugh Gallernau bumped the ball and a couple of Redkins into the end zone from that point.

And now the Bears are getting great interference—from the Redskins. Referee Bill Downs just ruled that the Redskins interfered with two more of Luckman's pass receivers and the Bears have the ball on the Washington 15.

IT'S FIVE PLAYS later, and it's Bears 14; Redskins 0. Mike Holovak just batted over from the one-yard line and was finally stopped by the off-set goal posts, too late to do the Redskins any good.

Sammy Baugh tried to get a pass away and is smeared for a 13-yard loss by Hartman, Smith, Cifers and Turner, who hit him high. Baugh goes down, and then waits for the four bad Bears to get off his community chest.

Touchdown, Redskins. From the one-yard line, Baugh takes a gander at the Bears big line, and wisely chooses to throw a pass. The ball and George McAfee hit Eddie Saenz in the zone simultaneously.

Sid Luckman can really find receivers for his passes. In fact he finds one too many at this point. Jim Keane grabbed Luckman's pass on the 50-yard line and so did Tom Farmer of the Redskins. When they finished their midair wrestle, the Redskins ended up with the ball.

REFEREE BILL DOWNS is very unpopular right now. Six Bears pile into Baugh and throw him for a nine-yard loss, whereupon the Redskins are penalized 15 yards for unnecessary roughness. Baugh shouldn't manhandle six Bears that way, I guess.

The Bears are throwing their weight around at the start of the second half. Into the game goes Thurman Garrett, 280-pound center from Oklahoma A. & M. If you don't think Garrett is big, imagine him outweighing a strapping 180-pounder by 100 pounds.

Don Kindt, rookie Bear halfback from Wisconsin, cuts loose around right end for 49 yards and the Redskins give chase on the solid theory there's b'ar in them thar heels.

21-7, Bears. Sid Luckman, getting enough protection to give him time to compute his 1947 income tax, decides to let that matter go for a while, and throws an 18-yard touchdown pass to Keane. Tom Farmer had Keane on the five-yard line, but you notice we use the past tense.

28-7, Bears. Baugh aims a pass at Eddie Saenz on the Bears four-yard line, and 96-yards later Bulldog Turner of the Bears crosses the goal line with the ball and Sammy Baugh, who rode Turner's back the last five yards without even slowing him up.

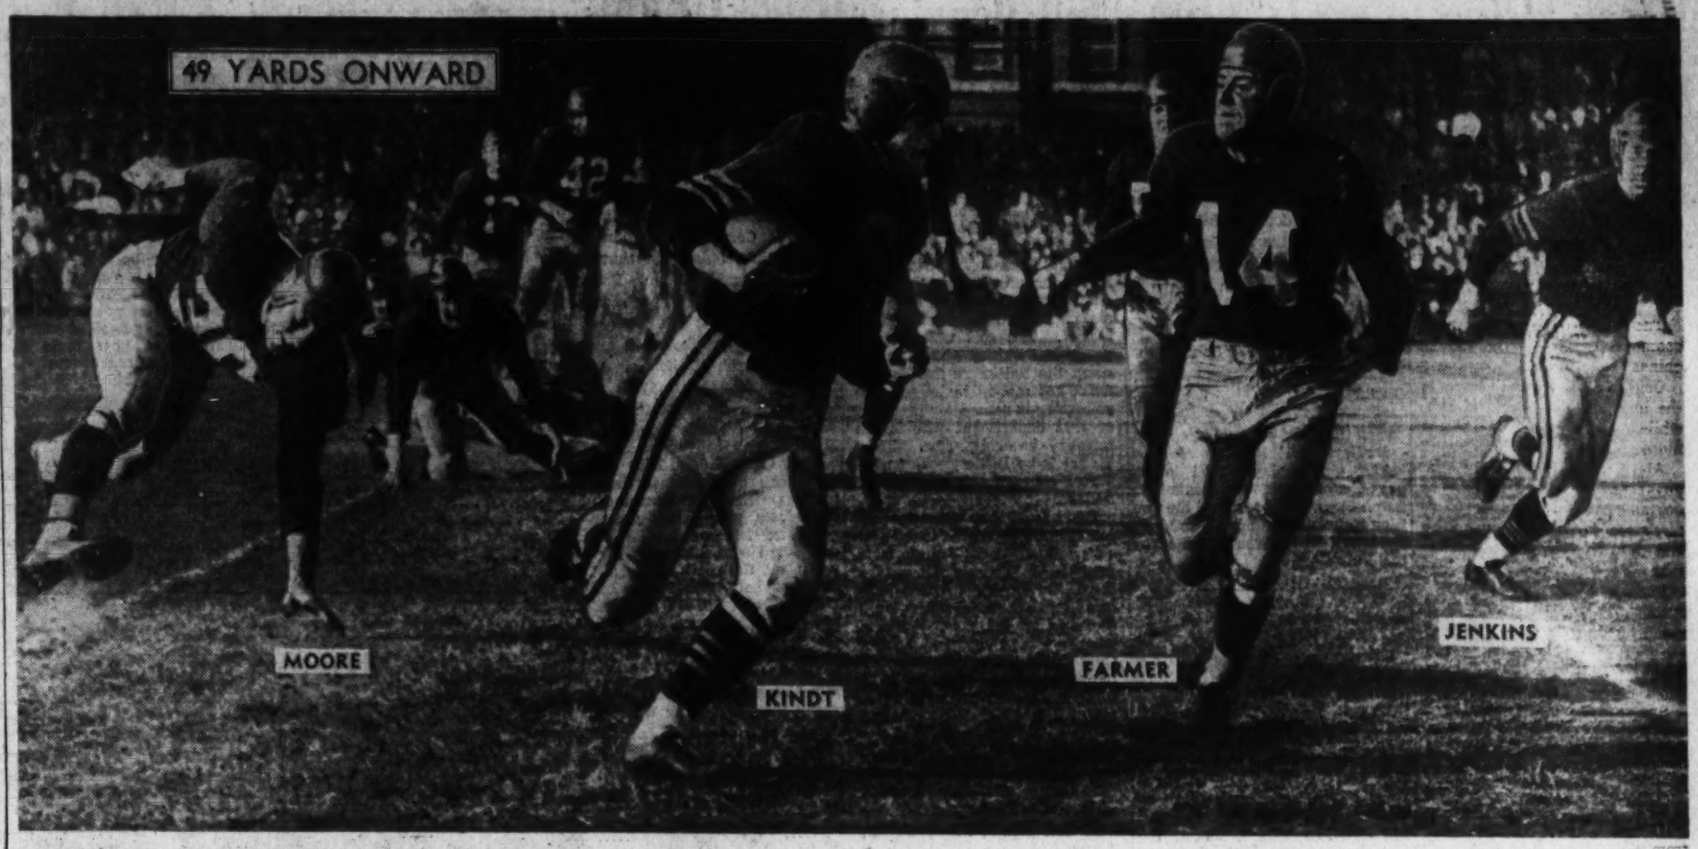
35-7, BEARS. DENOTE the passage of 2 minutes and 50 seconds any way you like. Anyway, the Bears have another touchdown. Pat Preston, Bear guard, picked up a Sammy Baugh fumble and raced to the Redskins five. On the next play it was Luckman to Cifers in the end zone.

35-13, Bears. Jim Youell replaces Baugh and takes the Redskins downfield quickly with his passes, the last of which is a 39-yard heave to Duckworth who goes all the way. The Bears block Poillon's kick for the extra point, very petty of them at this stage.

35-20, and the Redskins are doing better. Youell at this point looks like a better passer than both Baugh and Luckman, and pitches a six-yard touchdown throw to Duckworth, with 11 minutes of play remaining.

42-20, Bears. Coach George Halas of the Bears sends Luckman back into the game for obvious reasons. First he pitches the Bears to the Redskins' three, then he hoodwinks the Redskins with a touchdown pass to McAfee on a sleeper play in which the Bears didn't even bother to go into a huddle.

56-20, Bears. Suffice it to say they scored two more touchdowns in the last four minutes. It's the second worst beating the Redskins ever took in a league game. If they leave the park in bad odor with the crowd, that's understandable. They are suffering from Halastosis.



By William Klemm—The Washington Post

STRANGE ARE THE WAYS OF FOOTBALL—You'd think that Mr. Tom Farmer (14) of the Redskins would have little trouble stopping Don Kindt of the Bears in this bit of action in the third quarter yesterday at Griffith Stadium . . . but something went wrong. Mr. Farmer missed his man and Mr. Kindt went 49 yards before he was finally brought down. That gentleman at the left doing a partial handstand is Redskin Wilbur Moore who has just been brushed aside by Mr. Kindt. Mr. Moore recovered, however, to overtake Kindt 49 yards downfield. That other Redskin coming up behind Farmer is Jack Jenkins (38) who also missed. The Bears were running all day and rolled over the 'Skins, 56-20

Cards Whip Yanks, 27-7

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Paul Christman's passing riddled Boston's defenses for three touchdowns as the Chicago Cardinals, co-leaders of the National Football League Western Division, trimmed the Yanks, 27 to 7, before 22,286 at Comiskey Park today.

The Cards' fourth win in five league starts came after the crowd observed a minute of silence in memory of Cardinal Halfback Jeff Burkett, who was killed in a Utah plane crash last Friday.

With Christman connecting on two payoff passes to End Billy Dewell and one to Halfback Red Cochran, the Cardinals scored a touchdown in each period. The fourth Chicago score came on a one-yard smash by Charley Trippi.

Injured Pat Harder converted after three of the four Cardinal touchdowns.

The Yanks pushed over their only touchdown in the opening period as Dancewicz flipped a 15-yard scoring pass to Don Currivan after the same combination clicked on a 17-yard aerial to the Cardinal 15. Dancewicz completed five of 18 passes.

The Cardinals held a 13-7 halftime margin after Christman whipped an eight-yard touchdown pass to Dewell following a Yank fumble on Boston's 27 late in the second period.

A 70-yard march featuring Christman's passing, produced the third Cardinal touchdown in the third period. The drive was capped by Christman's seven-yard shot to Cochran after Pitching Paul had connected on tosses of 17, 11, 16 and 12 yards.

Christman clicked on a 15-yard toss to Dewell for the fourth Chicago score in the final period after the Cardinals paraded from their own 26.

Dons Smother Colts, 56-0; Dobbs Goes Wild

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Los Angeles Dons, operating with the greatest of ease behind their tremendous line, smothered the hapless Baltimore Colts, 56-0, bfore 27,000 All-America Football Conference fans today in Memorial Coliseum.

The Dons, scoring in every period, toyed with the ineffective Colts throughout the second half as Big Glenn Dobbs finally coming into his own for Los Angeles, tossed four touchdown passes to tie the All-America record. He was amply aided by Big John Kimbrough who bulled over for three touchdowns.

Score Sets Record

It was the most one-sided game the All-America has produced, Cleveland's 66-14 win over Brooklyn in 1946 being previous high.

Dobbs' scoring pass plays covered eight, 12, four and eight yards after his pitching had set up the counters.

Kimbrough took one of the eight yard flips and also tallied earlier on bucks of one and 12 yards.

Don Line Dominates

The bruising Don line dominated play so completely that the Colts never penetrated Los Angeles territory. They reached their own 42 once.

From the moment the Dons took the opening kickoff and marched 87 yards to a touchdown, Chuck Fenenbock circling end for 19 yards to score, the issue was scarcely in doubt. Harry Clarke's ten-yard smash and Kimbrough first touchdown made it 21-0 at half time.

After the Colts stopped one Don drive on their one-foot mark, the Los Angeles powerhouse began rolling in the third quarter with Dobbs at the helm. He threw to Kimbrough for eight and Ezzrett Anderson for 12 to make it 35-0.

Dobbs Hits Baldwin

In the final period, he hit Burr Baldwin for four and Walter Heap for eight again, with Kimbrough supplying one more tally on the ground, making it four by land and four by air.

Ben (The Toeless) Agajanian kept his perfect placement record by converting all eight scores. He missed a 27-yard field goal, however.

Graham Paces 14-7 Win Over San Francisco

San Francisco, Oct. 26 (AP).—Cleveland's Browns, sparked by the brilliant quarterbacking of Otto Graham, scored a 14-to-7 victory over the San Francisco 49ers today to tighten their grip on the lead of the Western Division of the All America Conference Professional Football League.

The all-important game between the top rivals was witnessed by 54,325 fans in gloomy weather.

Graham's long forward passes dropped into the waiting arms of his two ends, Dante Lavelli and Mac Speedie, for the winning touchdowns, one in the first and the other in the second period.

After yielding a touchdown on an 80-yard march in the third quarter, the Browns outplayed the 49ers in the final session.

Fullback Norman Standlee rammed over from the 1-foot line to end San Francisco's touchdown march in the third period. The big ball carrier had previously chalked up an 18-yard gain through the powerful Cleveland line in the long drive.

Steelers Stop Giants

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Pittsburgh cemented its grasp on the leadership of the eastern division in the National Football League today by defeating New York, 38 to 21, in a bruising game before 41,736 spectators.

Most of the paying customers came out to see Paul Governali, passer acquired last week by the Giants, do his aerial magic. But they witnessed, instead, some of the most vicious tackling and blocking ever produced in the Polo Grounds.

John Clements, the Steelers' ace back, romped 98 yards during the game but it was Steve Lach, one-time Duke punter, who ruined the Governali reception party. He passed six yards to Val Jansante for the first Pittsburgh touchdown in the opening quarter and banged over both the visitors' counters in the second.

Set-Up By Passes

The latter was set-up by a pair of passes from Clements to Jansante, the first good for 16 yards and the next for 44 to the six-yard line.

A 30-yard field goal by Joe Glamp completed the Steelers' first half scoring. He also converted after all of his team's five touchdowns.

An 18-yard flip from Governali to Vic Carroll, tackle who was an end for the play, brought all the New Yorkers could do in the first two periods and they fell even further behind when Clements and Bill Garnaas combined for a 68-yard pass and run play on the second formation after the intermission.

Garnaas Scores

Garnaas caught Clements' peg on his own 42 and easily ambled the remaining 58 yards behind a bevy of interferers. Jim Blumenstock banged from the 2-foot line over for the second New York marker just before the quarter ended. The Giants got possession when Frank Reagan recovered a fumble.

Sid Luckman Tosses 3 Touchdown Passes

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

There wasn't even a little privacy for the Washington Redskins yesterday as they absorbed their worst regular season National Football League beating in nine years, 56 to 20, from the Chicago Bears.

Everybody saw it. The largest crowd of paid customers ever to witness an athletic contest in Washington—36,591—was there for the kill.

The same Halas-trained brutes who rolled up a 73-0 margin over the 'Skins in the 1940 playoff game poured it on with eight touchdowns. That they didn't match their own playoff mark was largely because of the clock.

Besides the loss on the scoreboard, dropping Washington to third place in the Eastern Division of the league, the Redskins may have lost the services of Joe Tereshinski, prize rookie end. The big Georgian was removed late in the game with a partial disclocation of his right elbow. X-rays of the damage will be taken today.

Luckman On, Baugh Off

What was wrong with the Redskins? Well, Slingin' Sammy Baugh was not passing at his best and the Bears' Sid Luckman was. He threw three touchdown passes. That was the big difference—that and Chicago's viciously charging line.

It was a third-period pass interception that let the Bears get out of hand.

Washington was just about to cut Chicago's lead at that point to 21-14. It had romped on Baugh passes 70 yards to the Bear 8. Baugh was passing again on second down when the critical break came.

Clyde "Bulldog" Turner was where Baugh's receiver was supposed to be on the Bears' 4. The 235-pound center, veteran of seven NFL campaigns, thundered down the right sideline as hopeful Redskins gave chase.

Drags Baugh Across

Only Don Avery defended the goal but Baugh was catching up from behind. When tackle Fred Hartman disposed of Avery on the Redskin 10, Turner turned to his left and Baugh hooked a hand in

St. John's, Bullis Risk Clean Slates

Greater Washington's four top scholastic football teams, Bullis Prep, Episcopal of Alexandria, St. John's and McKinley Tech, put their undefeted records to the test again on this weekend's 16-game card.

The powerful Bullis team, recognized as one of the best in the East after its 20-13 victory over the Army Plebes last week, risks a five-game streak against once-beaten Fork Union Academy, at Fork Union, Va., in Saturday's top game.

Episcopal, also with five straight, is host to Randolph-Macon (Va.) Academy Saturday.

St. John's surprising Cadets, who didn't figure before the season began, to do better than win more than they lost, find themselves protecting a five-game string, against Georgetown Prep's Little Hoyas Friday night at Garrett Park.

The Bullis, Episcopal and St. John's games are nonleague affairs.

In Friday's top interhigh tussle, McKinley Tech's Trainers, unbeaten, but tied once in five games, continued their battle for first place, meeting the third-place Anacostia Indians Friday at Anacostia.

Central's Vikings, who are tied with Tech for first in interhigh standings with Woodrow Wilson's Green Tigers, Friday at Central. And in the other league tilt, Eastern's Ramblers, tied for fourth, are host to Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

St. Louis Takes 47-13 Beating

Olean, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP).—The St. Louis University Billikins, co-leaders of the Missouri Valley Conference and victors over Drake and Georgetown, got their bumps today from the Brown Indians of little St. Bonaventure—a 47-13 pummeling before 9200 fans in Forness Stadium.

The invading Billikens drew first blood, pushing over the goal after recovering a fumble on St. Bonaventure's 36. The Bonnies struck back with the tying score as Bob Kay smashed over from the 6 and went ahead as Frank Ferris kicked his first of five conversions.

St. Louis went out in front on a blocked kick. Chuck Llely batted down Steve Charsky's punt and Augie Garcia flopped on the rolling pigskin in the end zone. But the doughty Bonnies came from behind again, this time for keeps, launching an 80-yard drive that culminated in a 3-yard aerial from Dave Curtin to Bill Ebel. Ferris' kick put St. Bona in the lead, 14-13 as the half ended.

The statistics backed up the score, showing an 18-7 edge in first down for the Bonnies, who also rolled to 400 yards overland while holding St. Louis to 89.

Augusta, Va., Oct. 26.—Augusta defeated Fork Union, 13-8, here yesterday in a Virginia Military Academy League football game. It was Fork Union's first setback and marked the first time that Fork Union had been scored on this season.

Leo's Back in Town On 'Personal Matter'

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Leo Durocher, former manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, arrived in New York by plane from California to take care of "some personal business."

Asked if that included baseball, Leo said, "No, not necessarily. However, I expect to see those people while I am here."

Durocher said he expected to be in town for "about a week."

Lou's Good for 80 years

'What I've Been Waiting For,' Little Says of Army Upset

NEW YORK, OCT. 26 (AP).—Lou Little has been at Columbia for 18 years. As far as the school is concerned he can stay for the next 80.

After yesterday's 21-20 upset of Army, the big town belonged to Little and his roaring Lions who had not hit such giddy heights since they knocked off Stanford in the 1934 Rose Bowl game.

Columbia, one of the larger universities, actually draws its football team from the undergrads of Columbia College which has a very limited registration. Hence the intense excitement over the downfall of the Cadets who hadn't lost in 32 previous starts since they bowed to Navy in 1943.

BILL SWIACKI, the acrobatic end whose catches of Gene Rossides' passes turned the tide, was carried off Baker Field on the shoulders of his mates as the goal posts came crackling down onto the green turf.

Little's first move after the final gun was a youthful leap over the bench to receive the congratulations of Mrs. Little. That done, he followed his "boys" to the clubhouse where he could do little more than babble incoherently.

Tackle Hank O'Shaughnessy, who became the father of a daughter Thursday, walked over to Little and handed out a cigar.

That was what Little had been waiting for, too. Not the cigar, but the win over the Cadets because he thought he had a pretty fair ball club last year, too, but was beaten by Army, 48-14.

Dapper Named Best

St. Louis, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Cliff Dapper, catcher for the Mobile Bears, was named the most valuable player of the Southern Association by the Sporting News today.

Packer Line Holds Dudley Scoreless

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 26 (AP).—An aggressive Green Bay line slammed the door on Bill Dudley today to give the Packers a 34 to 17 victory over the Detroit Lions and a tighter grasp on a share of the national football league's western division leadership.

A crowd of 25,197 saw the Packers' final appearance at City Stadium this year.

It was Indian Jack Jacobs' passes that paid off for Green Bay.

Dudley, the league's scoring leader until today, failed to hit pay dirt himself but passed to Ralph Heywood for one of the two Lion touchdowns and figured in almost all the offense exhibited by the Detroiters.

Green Bay, now tied with the Chicago Cardinals for the Western Division lead with four victories and one loss apiece, scored the first time it got the ball, Jacobs hitting Clyde Goodnight with an 18-yard toss to climax a 72-yard march. Ward Cuff kicked the first of four extra points.

Ted Fritsch tallied soon after the second period opened. Irv Comp intercepted one of Clyde LeForce's passes on the Lion 27 and Fritsch needed just six plays to pick up the touchdown, crashing through from the 1.

The third period was all Green Bay, the Packers counting six points on a pair of field goals by Ward Cuff from the 39 and 12 yard lines after the ground attack failed, and Ed Cody slashing off tackle for 32 yards in between the kicks.

Cody wound up the Packer scoring in the final minute of the game, skirting his own left end for 8 yards after Comp had roared down the sidelines for 34 yards to gain position.

The Lions, never seriously in the ball game, scored in the third and fourth periods.

At Laurel

DEAR FOLKS:

Betting here is up over 8 per cent. The new Laurel management has made improvements and is doing everything to put on a good show. However, the closing of gambling spots from Virginia to Baltimore has been a factor along with the excellent weather and last, but not least, that fact that Garden State conflicted for only 10 days this year. Alan Clarke seems to have the makings of a fine horse in Fritz Maisel. The colt won impressively last Friday and I understand the Baltim re fire department has money to burn. The youngster is named for the chief of that department who is the former baseball star. Fritz, Maisel is by Little Beans and is a real chip off the old block, I believe.

Can't remember when another jockey rode two daily doubles on consecutive days — the trick turned by Carson Kirk, the Silver Spring pride. Alfred Vanderbilt's Loser Weeper is a coming star and has the stretch punch to win distance affairs. Only three more programs at Laurel and then it will be on to Pimlico. See you on the rail. . . .

Bills Romp, 35-7, Over Brooklyn

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Buffalo Bills stayed in the thick of the fight for the All-America Football Conference Eastern Division title today by thumping the hapless Brooklyn Dodgers 35-7 before 23,762 spectators in Civic Stadium.

The Bisons were off to a slow start in search of their sixth victory, spotting the Dodgers a 7-0 lead on Mickey Colmer's 41-yard dash down the side line and Phil Martinovich's conversion.

Then George (The Kid) Ratterman took over against the only team which had thwarted his touchdown passes this season—a 14-14 tie last week. Ratterman completed 9 of 16 passes for 133 yards as the Bills took a 14-7 lead at half time, and had a game standing of 11 completions in 22 attempts for 171 yards. He tossed two touchdown passes to bring his year's total to 15.

The outmanned Dodgers brought only 30 men to the game and lost one of them when Tex Warrington was disqualified in the second quarter for a tiff with Bill Ohrenberger, the head linesman, after an unnecessary roughness penalty had been called against the Dodgers.

O. O. (Scrappy) Kessing, deputy commissioner who saw the game, announced later that he had suspended Warrington for the rest of the season and fined him $500.

Ratterman completed five of nine passes as the Bills went 69 yards to tie, Julie Rykovich cracking over guard for the last five yards, and Graham Armstrong adding the first of his five extra points. Ratterman's pass to Vic Kulbitski, who ran 38 yards behind a screen of five linemen, sent the Bills ahead, 14-7.

A spectacular forward-lateral gained 34 yards for the Bills' fourth score. Ratterman flipped to Lafayette (Dolly) King on the Dodger 20, and King lateraled to Kulbitski who went the last 20 yards. Conference scoring rules credited Ratterman with a touchdown pass on the play.

Muha's Booming Punts Lead Eagles to 14-7 Upset of Rams

Philadelphia, Oct. 26 (AP).—Joe Muha's booming kicks bottled up Bob Waterfield and the Los Angeles Rams today and the Philadelphia Eagles treated a record Shibe Park crowd to a 14-7 upset over their National Football League rivals.

By their triumph the Eagles maintained their hex over Waterfield—beating him for the third time in as many games. The crowd of 38,903 eclipsed the mark of 38,715 fans that watched the Eagles-Rams game here in 1945.

The one-time Virginia Military Institute backfield star's first quick kick late in the opening period traveled 72 yards from the Eagles 4 yard line to the Ram's 24. Shortly thereafter Ernie Steele leaped up to intercept a Waterfield pass and scooted 42 yards to the Los Angeles 19. Five plays later, Steve Van Buren rammed across from the 4.

Bosh Pritchard, another V. M. I. product, returned a Waterfield punt to the Ram's 45 from where Van Buren and Muha teamed to push the pigskin to the 1-yard stripe. Thompson scored on a quarterback sneak. Cliff Patton converted after each score.

The Rams struck for their only score in the final stanza with Wayne Hoffman of the University of Southern California scoring from the 1. Hoffman gained 32 yards of a 64-yard drive of straight line smashes. Waterfield converted.

Stribling After 8th Straight Fight Victory Against Walker

Undefeated during 1947, Ken Stribling, Washington colored middleweight, will be after his eighth victory of the season tonight at Turner's Arena, with Johnny Walker, well known Philadelphia battler, as his opponent over the 10-round route.

Walker, a pre-medical student at Temple, has beaten Smuggy Hursey in Baltimore, and also kayoed Ossie (Bulldog) Harris, the hard-hitting Pittsburgher.

Upon the outcome of tonight's match hinges Stribling's chances of tangling with Bee Bee Washington sometime this winter.

Stribling got by Irish Johnny Cooper in the season's indoor opener at the Arena after 10 bruising rounds. Before that he knocked out Frank Sweeney and Joe Gannon, but it's going to be a little tougher against the shifty Walker, who covers up nicely, and punches hard with either fist.

Midget Wolgast, former world's flyweight champion, will be in Walker's corner to assist Chris Dundee.

Frank Akin's new boy, Roscoe Mercer, will box Sonny Boy Bunn in a five-rounder, while another five will find Kid Alexander boxing Red Gaddis. Fours show Angelo Marini against Lucky Stephens, Nate Palmer against Billy Snead and Elkins Brothers against Ernie Pope, the first at 8:45.

Hi-Skor Holds Classes For Women Bowlers

Free bowling classes for women, 16 to 60, will commence next Saturday afternoon at the Hi-Skor alleys, with Lorraine Gulli, one of the nation's greatest champions of all time, doing the instructing.

Sponsor of the feminine clinic is the Sport Center, which, in cooperation with Manager Eddie Winslow and his Hi-Skor staff, will present the classes for four straight Saturdays.

Luckman Leads Bears In 56 to 20 Rampage

his jersey. The big lineman slowed a little but that was all. Baugh was dragged into the end zone and the Bears had a 28-7 lead.

It was almost no contest from then on. Baugh went out and Jim Youel got his first passing chance in some time.

He did well, too, but his two touchdown passes couldn't change the complexion of things much, particularly when Chicago added a couple of fourth-period scores of its own.

The Bears varied the scoring, if nothing else. Ten players contributed to the Redskins' downfall and their points came on everything from one-yard smashes to Turner's 96-yard gallop.

In the order they scored touchdowns were Hugh Gallarneau, Mike Holovak, Jim Keane, Turner, Ed Cifers, George McAfee, Frank Minini and Bob Fenimore.

The ninth man, and certainly the most consistent, was Ray McLean, the veteran placekick artist who booted seven straight extra points.

The tenth scorer, as Chicago added insult to the 'Skins lacerated feelings, was Sid Luckman. After he'd passed to his third touchdown of the game, a three-yard one to McAfee, in the fourth quarter, he and McLean switched jobs to show how easy it all was.

Instead of holding for the extra point, Luckman kicked and McLean did the holding.

Little Saenz Most Effective

What little glory the Redskins could collect went mostly to Wingin' Eddie Saenz, the smallest man on the squad. The California flash scored once on a pass from Baugh and proved the most effective offensive Redskin on the field.

Big Joe Duckworth, on a 39-yard pass play in the third quarter and a 6-yard toss in the fourth, completed Washington's scoring except for Dick Poillon's pair of conversions.

Luckman's dominance of the aerial duel with Baugh is hardly indicated by statistics. He completed 22 of 31 tosses for 270 yards while Baugh was clicking on 17 of 26 for 220 yards. In secondary roles Youel completed 9 out of 20 for 191 yards and Luckman's replacement, Nick Sacrinty, had three good ones in seven tries.

Washington's trouble was launched as Center Jack Sommers missed two chances for field goals in the first period. From the 38 he was short and he repeated the effort from the 33 when Chicago was offside.

Taking over on the 26, to which point McAfee returned the second kick, Chicago rolled all the way to its first score. Of prime importance in the drive was an interference ruling against Redskin Tom Farmer, giving the Bears the ball on the one. Gallarneau went over in one try.

Baugh pushed the Skins to the Bears' 36 before the ball was lost on downs, and again Chicago roared to a score.

Luckman hurling to McAfee, Keane and Kavanaugh, with Fenimore doing some fancy running, brought the ball to the one-yard stripe. Holovak, the former Boston College ace, went through on first down.

Baugh and the Redskins finally moved. From their own 40, where Saenz had lugged the ball on the kickoff, it took exactly nine plays to break the home team's scoreless state.

Saenz caught four of Baugh's tosses, for 17, 28, and 10 yards and the goal from 1 yard out.

That was early in the second quarter and the score—14-7 favoring the Bears—stayed just like that through half time. A lot of bruising play unfolded, however, and numerous penalties kept the stands in an uproar.

When Washington could get no farther than midfield with the second-half kickoff, Chicago showed its host how easy it was to score. From the 20, after Baugh's booming punt into the end zone, four line plays and a pass made it 21-7.

Keane Scores on Pass

Holovak made 7 yards, on two identical plays Kindt annexed 8 and 48 yards, and then McAfee lost a yard to the Redskin 18.

Luckman's pass hit Keane in the stomach and the big wingman broke away from Farmer to score standing up.

Then came Turner's interception, breaking the back of Redskin comeback hopes. Salt was poured into the widening wound shortly after the count climbed to 28-7 when Baugh fumbled at midfields.

He was hit hard by Cifers, former Redskin end, and Guard Pat Preston scooped up the ball and raced to the five before he was pulled down.

By way of repaying Cifers for causing the fumble, Luckman let him catch a touchdown pass on the next play, big Ed falling over while wrapped in Farmer's embrace.

With the score 35-7 and 2:40 of the third period left, Redskin officials either decided the game was lost or it wasn't Baugh's day.

Youel went in, completed the first two passes he threw and finally was on the heaving end as Duckworth grabbed a 35-yarder and rolled four yards over Mullins into the end zone.

Skins Score Again

The final Redskin score came at the end of a 79-yard move generated for the most part by Youel in the passing slot.

A Bear penalty for roughness helped, and just before the payoff midway of the last quarter Saenz was taking Youel's 10-yard toss and romping 15 more to the Bear 6.

Duckworth was leaning nonchalantly against a goal post when he grabbed the scoring pass and fell sideways.

Chicago's three clinchers later gave the fans a thrill but that's all. After a second-team onslaught of 64 yards McAfee caught the Redskins with an old high school trick.

". . . it is clear that the Committee on Un-American Activities is actually trying certain individuals for alleged subversive and un-American acts without affording them the ordinary rights accorded to the most degraded criminal; namely, the right to cross-examine their accusers and the right to call witnesses on their own behalf . . . We do not believe that the committee is conducting a fair investigation. We think the course on which it has embarked threatens to lead to greater dangers than those with which it is presently concerned!"

The New York Herald-Tribune

". . . the beliefs of men and women who write for the screen are, like the beliefs of any ordinary men and women, nobody's business but their own, as the Bill of Rights mentions. Neither Mr. Thomas nor the Congress in which he sits is empowered to dictate what Americans shall think . . . Not Hollywood but Congress is being investigated here."

From an Editorial in
The Washington Post
October 21, 1947

"Chairman Thomas of the House Committee on Un-American Activities may pretend that his super-colossal Hollywood investigation is aimed not at interference but merely at exposure. Its effect, nevertheless, is to intimidate and coerce the industry into an even more rigid acceptance of Mr. Thomas' concepts of Americanism . . . Those who labor in Hollywood are not accustomed to much privacy; but they should be left free, at least, to think as they please."

From an Editorial in The Chicago Times
October 22, 1947

"Of course the real object of Chairman Thomas and the reactionary Republican majority of the House Un-American Activities Committee is not primarily to uncover subversive influences in Hollywood. It is to smear New Dealers and whatever their progressive successors may be called. So rather than looking at the records, the old familiar Dies Committee smear technique is being used."

Statement of The Committee for The First Amendment

We, the undersigned, as American citizens who believe in constitutional democratic government, are disgusted and outraged by the continuing attempt of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to smear the Motion Picture Industry.

We hold that these hearings are morally wrong because:

Any investigation into the political beliefs of the individual is contrary to the basic principles of our democracy;

Any attempt to curb freedom of expression and to set arbitrary standards of Americanism is in itself disloyal to both the spirit and the letter of our Constitution.

IF THERE is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein.

Board of Education vs. Barnette
United States Supreme Court, 1945

A STATEMENT from THE "UNFRIENDLY" WITNESSES

For a full week we have been assailed by the calculated fury of men in whose minds hearsay becomes the test of truth, slander the measure of integrity, and perjury the criterion of patriotism. All rights of cross-examination have been denied to us. Our counsel have been ejected or silenced when they have sought to speak out in our behalf.

It has been specifically urged upon the committee that we, and all others who disagree with its new and degraded standards of Americanism, be prevented from working at our chosen professions; that we be stripped of our citizenship; that we be exiled to foreign countries; that we be handed over to mobs and murdered. The committee has approved such proposals by commending the patriotism of those who advanced them.

This unprecedented attack has been levelled not only against our rights as artists and trade unionists and citizens, but against the right of every American to see, to hear, to read, to think, to speak, to assemble, to organize, to vote, to act as he wishes within the law.

After the most searching consideration of what has happened here in Washington, we are forced to the inevitable conclusion that the committee has become the leading and principal spearhead for the suppression of basic democratic rights.

We therefore propose to use every legal means within our power to abolish this evil thing which calls itself the House Committee on Un-American Activities and to put an end, once and for all, to the uncontrolled tyranny for which it stands.

GAA Candidates Outline Programs

Greater Arlington Association Centers Opposition on Conference Candidates

(Second of a series on the Arlington School Board election.)

Supporting five candidates in the wide-open race for Arlington County's first elected school board, the Greater Arlington Association is centering its program on pay-as-you-go spending.

Indorsement of all five of the candidates in the 12-man contest for five board seats was made by the GAA after the office seekers had listed their candidacy. The election will be held November 4, when voters also ballot for other county and State officials.

Last May, when the GAA was headed by Charles O. Pratt, the organization opposed both a bond issue and an elected school board when those issues were presented to the county voters.

Hagan Heads Association

J. Foster Hagan, Arlington lawyer and father of three children who now heads the association, was a candidate for the State House of Delegates in 1931 and 1945, and a candidate, also unsuccessfully, for the State Senate in 1943. He was graduated from George Washington University Law School and later taught at Arlington's Washington-Lee High School.

Principal target of the GAA in the election is the Arlington school board nominating conference and its slate of five candidates.

GAA candidates and highlights of their proposals follow:

President of the Arlington County Medical Society and head of the Arlington County Tuberculosis Clinic, Dr. Charles P. Cake has two sons in the county's junior high schools.

County resident for 11 years, he served two years as a senior surgeon in the Public Health Service, and in 1937 instituted examination of county high school students for tuberculosis. Graduated from the University of Virginia School of Medicine, he has offices in Arlington and Washington.

Cake

"Our primary need in the county," said Dr. Cake, "is reduction of the teacher load. I am convinced that we need construction of new classrooms and new schools to do that, and adequate salaries to attract and hold good teachers."

He also cited the need for an improved school health program and increased facilities for adult education. "One of our greatest needs," he added, "is an accredited high school for Negroes. I firmly believe we must give equal opportunity to all children, regardless of race."

"I am not one of the persons who think that our schools are in a deplorable condition," said Ernest T. Gearheart, jr., practicing attorney and father of one child.

"Some improvements are badly needed, but I think we have a firm foundation on which to build," he said. County resident since 1937, Gearheart attended the University of Richmond and George Washington University, and served in the Army for three years.

Gearhart

His program consists, he said, in "putting first things first. I am not making a lot of high-sounding promises ... the most pressing need ... is to reduce the teacher load as much as possible ... by making additions to existing school buildings and constructing new schools where needed."

He said he attended the nominating conference convention—"I was not invited, I just went"—and "I charge that the nominees of that meeting represent a minority group."

Former teacher in Wisconsin's public schools and member of the current appointed school board, Ernest C. Betts, jr., is assistant to the librarian, Department of Agriculture.

Betts

President of the Nellie Custis P-TA he holds several offices in Calvary Methodist Church aand is active in the Jefferson Civic League. Father of three children, aged 9 years, 7 years and 6 months, he attended Platteville, Wis., State Teacher's College and has lived in the county nine years.

He is making no specific commitments, said Betts, "but the general promise that if elected I will do my best to see that my sons and the other youth of Arlington are provided with the best education possible.

"Some of my opponents have labeled me the 'status quo incumbent,'" he said. "My reply was that I certainly was and am for school improvements ... they can be made by other means than a bond issue."

Second School Board incumbent on the GAA-supported slate is William Montgomery Smith, county resident for 30 years, graduate of the George Washington University Law School, World War I veteran, and a practicing attorney.

Smith

Smith, whose board term began July 1, 1945, has a 17-year-old son at Washington-Lee High School, is senior warden of Trinity Episcopal Church, and is active in PTA groups.

"No school system is a finished school system," said Smith. "I believe in school improvements and I am inclined to pay-as-you-go financing."

While "not the best in the country, Arlington County schools are good schools. They compare favorably with Washington and our other neighbors. I heartily disagree with those who say we have 'hillbilly' schools ... such remarks have a bad morale effect on our students and teachers."

"The nominating conference slate has confused the issues in this campaign," charges Ralph M. Kimble, who has been serving as executive secretary of the Republican County Committee for the past two years, and is secretary of the Metropolitan Building and Loan Association.

Kimble

"The real issue is the ways and means to achieve the necessary improvements in the schools," he said. "The only promise they make is to hang a millstone of debt around the necks of the citizens of the county."

County resident for 15 years, Kimble attended Mercer University and George Washington University, and during the last war served with the Coast Guard Temporary Reserve.

He charged that the conference candidates "cite statistics and compare, accuse and belittle, and in the same breath ask you to have faith in the schools." Kimble said, "I have no record to stand on—I expect to make one."

Love of Good Music Unites 25 Amateurs At Junior College

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Twenty-five persons who by day have as many different vocations banded together last Thursday night with one common avocation—music.

From the oldster who "always wanted to be a professional musician" but wound up a section foreman to the youth who drove 30 miles for the rehearsal, their common love of good music and the great composers drew them together.

It was the first rehearsal of the fledgling Montgomery County Symphony Orchestra held at the Montgomery Junior College, which is sponsoring what Dean Hugh G. Price, of the college, hopes will become a "vibrant organization vital to the community."

Feel It's Very Important

"We are sponsoring the orchestra because we think it is very important to have something like this in the community," he told the musicians.

Conductor of the orchestra, who hopes eventually to step down for one with more spare time was Dr. John R. Riggleman, an economist with the Interior Department and a part time instructor at the junior college.

During the first selection ever played by the new group, "Orpheus in der Unterwelt," Dr. Riggleman occasionally waved his baton, stopped the musicians and told them it should have been "da da dee up, da da dee up."

Few of the 25 musicians said they had played professionally. "I played with a dance band 'way back,'" declared W. C. Miller of 4769 Bradley blvd., who is a Capital Transit supervisor by day.

He Does Blowing Now

An Army lieutenant who said he was a patient at Walter Reed Hospital, pointed to his instrument and said: "I was blown up in Europe, and I don't want the doc to find out I'm violating his orders by blowing this thing."

Playing a second clarinet was Benedict Termini, 4410 W. Virginia ave., Bethesda, Md. A teacher at Bell Vocational School, in the District, Termini plays the second clarinet.

Also a clarinetist was Patsy Perry, 22, of 5601 33d st. nw., who said she played with college orchestras.

Robert K. Coote, 6706 Exeter rd., Bethesda, is a fellow economist of Dr. Riggleman's at the Interior Department and a flute player with the orchestra. He has played "off and on" since he was "very young," he says.

"We are going to work very hard until we find out if the community wants a symphony orchestra," Dr. Riggleman said during a break. Then, looking around, he drew a laugh when he said: "We sure do need an oboe player."

Describing the orchestra's first rehearsal, he said: "I think we have made a very good start."

Truman Joins In Honoring Men of Navy

President Truman in a Navy-Day statement yesterday called for "the maintenance of ready forces" to insure "a just and proper peace."

The Chief Executive, in sending greetings in recognition of the twenty-sixth annual observance of Navy Day today to "the United States Navy and those who man the ranks of this bulwark of defense," said:

"In a world still shaken by the upheaval of war and beset by the problems of peace, the observance of Navy Day by the American people is of particular significance."

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations, who joined other national leaders in paying tribute to the American Navy, said in a radio broadcast that "peace shall cover the earth as the waters cover the seas."

A two-engine Navy bomber carrying 15 wreaths, took off at 2:15 p. m. yesterday from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia to drop the flowers in the Atlantic Ocean 15 miles off Cape May, N. J., in commemoration of naval war dead.

While Lieut. Comdr. E. R. Sullivan, Ch. C., USNR, chaplain of the Naval Receiving Station at Anacostia, blessed the flowers, two crewmen dropped them from an open hatch while the plane was 800 feet above the water.

The Naval Air Test Center at the the Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md., played host to an estimated 2400 persons yesterday.

The USS Sea Robin, the latest-type fleet subamrine, drew several hundred visitors yesterday to its berth at the Franklin st. annex of the Naval Ordnance Plant, Alexandria, Va. Guard to Use Radar in Air 'Attack' Here

Washington is going to get bombed next Sunday.

"Enemy aircraft" will streak over the Washington skyline, but their location will be revealed by the use of radar and they will be intercepted by "friendly" fighter planes.

It's all part of a demonstration to start the National Guard's weeklong show of equipment, designed to further Operation 88,888—the nationwide recruiting campaign to enlist a man a minute during the period from September 16 to November 16.

Radar Demonstration

The demonstration will reveal to the general public for the first time the use of radar in the location of enemy planes.

Twenty-four A-26 attack bombers from United States midwestern and southern points will serve as the enemy planes. They will be intercepted by P-47s of the 121st Fighter Squadron of the local National Guard, the 104th Fighter Squadron of the Baltimore National Guard, and the 149th Fighter Squadron of the Richmond National Guard.

The air spectacle will be presented over the Washington Monument area, and a running account of the progress of the "battle" will be given over a public address system on the grounds. The public will be able to see exactly how ground direction to aircraft is coordinated on a large scale map that will designate positions both of enemy and friendly planes.

Time for the demonstration will be announced later. The Weather Bureau has "promised" to cooperate with a fine sunny day, but should this cooperation be withdrawn because of other circumstances, the demonstration will be postponed.

Catholic Women Meet

A hundred women from 15 parishes attended the quarterly meeting yesterday of the Northern Virginia Deanery Council of the National Council of Catholic Women at St. Agnes Church, Cherrydale.

Albert Sherman of Fairfax, Marvin Wilson of Alexandria and Hugh McGrath of Arlington spoke on the Community Chest.

Growth in Population Boosts Fairfax Tax Rate 26 Pct.

Fairfax County is no longer a haven of escape from high metropolitan taxes.

Tax bills on personal property and real estate, which went out last week, will demonstrate this. Fairfax taxpayers this year will pay $3.07 per $100, as assessed on personal belongings and real estate.

Only variation is in the town of Falls Church, which escape the 7-cent county levy for fire protection by supporting its own department.

The county rate shows a 26 per cent increase over the 1946 rate of $2.46, and a climb of 62 per cent since 1942.

Chief reason for this is the county's amazing recent growth in population. In 1940 the commissioner of revenue's office listed the population at 40,000, or about 100 persons a square mile. This year's tax rate is based on a figure of 84,000.

The Fairfax personal property tax is based on a "fair market value," and it compares with $2 in the District, $2.80 in Alexandria. Maryland has recently abolished this tax.

Despite the comparatively high rate of tax on real estate, Fairfax has not actually caught up with its metropolitan neighbors. The county assesses property at only one third its actual value. Thus the $3.07 rate in Fairfax means payment of only $1.02 of the market value.

This compares with $2 in the District, $1.25 in Alexandria, $1.30 in Arlington, $1.88 in Montgomery County, and a base rate of $1.95 in Prince Georges County.

But the high personal property tax will help make up the difference. Residents this year will pay $293,459.27 on personal belongings, a 56.7 per cent increase over last year.

$1,155,526.93, as compared with the 1946 figure of $633,899.90. This is an index to county building in 1946. Next year's figure will be further swelled by 1947 building, which had reached 20 million dollars by September 30.

Through all this, the western half of the county remains rural. County officials believe it will stay that way for some years to come. Residents of Falls Church, Providence and Mount Vernon Districts contribute two thirds of the county real estate tax. But the dairy farmer in the west pays the $3.07 rate, while his neighbor in adjoining Loudoun County pays only $1.25 per $100, based on 40 per cent of real value.

Md. Assembly In Special Session Nov. 5

Governor Lane Seeks Solution of Baltimore Financial Problem

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., announced in Annapolis last night he would call a special session of the Maryland General Assembly for November 5.

The announcement stemmed from a promise the Governor made several months ago that he would call a special session this fall to find tax money to carry on Baltimore city affairs.

The State's controversial new sales tax also is expected to get another airing once the legislators reconvene and length of the special session, the Associated Press said last night, may depend upon the intensity of the sales tax debate.

Conferred With Others

Lane conferred with State Senate President Joseph Byrnes (D., Baltimore), House Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert (D., Harford), Senate Majority Leader L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges County) and House Majority Leader Leroy Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges County) before making his special session announcement.

The Governor said the formal proclamation convening the session would be issued this morning.

"I will recommend to the members of the General Assembly," the Governor said, "that in the interest in the welfare of the State as a whole, they confine their deliberations to the fiscal legislation in Baltimore City and such other matters of an emergency nature as are presented for their consideration."

He did not specify what "other matters" would be involved.

Baltimore, whose financial plight primarily prompted the session, needs about seven million dollars in additional revenue to balance its 82-million-dollar city budget and its special taxing powers on such items as liquor and tobacco expire at the end of this year.

Passed Bill Last Winter

The General Assembly at its regular session last winter passed a bill t ogive the city the same general taxing powers as the State itself, but the bill was vetoed by Lane who termed it "contrary to good public policy."

There has been no announcement as to what action the administration will recommend to the Assembly to solve Baltimore's financial plight, but it is believed probable the administration will recommend some modification of the vetoed bill.

The State legislative council, it was learned, will meet in Baltimore Tuesday to consider matters to come before the special session. Most legislators, the Associated Press said, feel the special session's work can be completed in two days— three at the most—and the legislators could be on their way home by Friday, November 7.

Governor Lane said the call would specify 2 p. m., November 5, as the convening hour. He said assembly members weer notified yesterday by telegrams of the impending call.

Area News in Brief

How to Erase Marks Of Halloween Told

While the Police Department's fond hopes are that it won't be needed, District merchants yesterday got the word on how to take off marks left by Halloween pranksters.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett said Saturday that he "hoped" parents would instruct their children against defacing walls, windows or automobiles by markings with paint or soap.

Comes now the Bureau of Standards with recommendations on methods for removing "the undesired markings."

You wash off the soap; use gasoline or other solvent to get rid of the wax crayons and candles. If you don't want to depend on either, and haven't the Police Department's wistful hope, use protective petroleum jelly or lubricating oil over glass surfaces to discourage marking. And you take THAT off with water and soap.

Holy Name Speaker Urges Charity Toward Attackers

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Catholics at a mass open-air service honoring "Christ the King," yesterday were urged to have charity and patience when their faith is attacked.

The Rev. John Tracy Ellis, addressing an audience of 18,000 who assembled at the Washington Monument grounds following a parade of 9000 men and boys down Constitution ave., declared:

"Never let it be said of you that you have contributed to the seething waves of hate which seem to have engulfed so many men . . . that you treat your colored brethren with anything but charity and kindness, that you deal with your employes and employers in a way that is other than just and fair . . ."

Police estimated that 35,000 spectators earlier in the afternoon viewed the parade which opened the "Feast of Christ the King" demonstration sponsored by the Washington Section of the Holy Name Society.

Defends Taylor Mission

In his sermon, Dr. Ellis, associate professor of church history at Catholic University, urged his audience not to permit "idle rumor and gossip to inflame your hearts with passion and hatred," but "keep your minds calm and clear for reasoned defense of your position as American Catholic men, loyal to both your church and your country."

Earlier in his sermon, Father Ellis scored "the specious reasoning of a noisy few who profess to see a peril to the American doctrine of separation of church and state in Mr. Taylor's mission (to the Vatican)."

"Let those who worry over the presence of Myron C. Taylor at the Court of Pope Pius XII understand that the action of his appointment was not that of the Catholics of the United States but of a Protestant President; let them realize, too, that the importance of that mission must be great, indeed, when the President was prompted to tell the Pope in his letter of last August 6 that 'these exchanges have already contributed toward a sound and lasting peace.'"

Holds Catholics Indifferent

"Whether or not Mr. Taylor remains at Vatican City is the concern and business of the President of the United States and the Department of State," asserted the priest. "American Catholics—as Catholics—are entirely indifferent whether he remains or returns, for they know the quality of their religious faith does not rise or fall on the shaky scaffolding of diplomatic representation of their Government at Vatican City."

Following Father Ellis' sermon, the most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, was the celebrant at solemn benediction before an altar adorned with candles and yelow flowers.

The delegate earlier had reviewed the parade from the flag-draped stand at 15th st. and Constitution ave.

The procession, an hour-and-a-half long, was led by a 49-man police motorcycle escort. Roland F. Hyland, former president of the Holy Name Union of Washington and grand marshal; Lawrence J. McDonnell, present president, and their aides marched in tophats, striped trousers and cutaway coats.

Members of the Catholic Police and Firemen's Society participated as did students of Catholic University's religious houses. The band and cadets of St. John's College—300 strong—were military escorts to the apostolic delegate.

First in line of march among the 60 parish Holy Name units from the District and Maryland were members of the Holy Rosary Church, at 3d and F sts. nw., led by the Rev. Nicholas de Carlo, pastor. Most of the hundreds of men and boys carried either small American flags or tiny blue Holy Name banners. Ten bands, most of them from churches, played.

Joining in the procession were choir boys, many wearing red and white vestments; Catholic War Veterans, Boy Scouts and Cubs. The only feminine note was provided by girls in the white-garbed Elks' Boys and Girls from Silver Spring.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Beautiful Romance, Just Like Those In the Movies, Couple Marry and Wife Tries To Make Marriage Ideal, But Man Grows Cool

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Our courtship was a beautiful romance; the sort of romance one sees only in motion pictures. When Ned asked me to marry him, of course my answer was "Yes."

Thereafter I busied myself reading books on how to have a happy, successful marriage; and now that we are married I have followed the rules as carefully as you would a baby's feeding formula.

I am a good sport, I like all sports my husband likes, I am a good housekeeper, I am always agreeable and never nag, I treat him as an infant and worship him as a king; and he admits I am very good to him, also a good businesswoman.

Shuns Wife's Touch or Kiss

YET WHEN it comes to a good-night kiss or my accidentally getting close to him, he shuns me. He is far different from the way he was during our courtship, when he gave me a solemn promise to be always that happy. Can you please tell me where I have failed as a wife?

I know definitely that there isn't another woman; and nowadays I call myself a business-wife, because that is the attitude he has forced on me. I love Ned more than anything in the world, but I am ready to throw water on the fire, unless you can help me. K. C.

Wife's Behavior Is Off the Beam

DEAR K. C.: As a result of acting—and I mean "acting"—impossibly sweet, in pursuit of the foolish objective of trying to make marriage a perennial, out-of-this-world honeymoon, you are completely stifling your real personality and casting your husband in a false role too.

He is like a fly bogged down in a jug of molasses and naturally he is resistant to so much sugar. That's why he shrinks from your accidental touch or good-night kiss.

Your concept of successful marriage and how to achieve it is miles off the beam. You are getting the cart before the horse if you suppose that romantic, ecstatic courtship and honeymoon constitute the model for ideal marriage. Romantic love is comparable to strong wine, and good married love to nourishing bread.

Successful marriage is a down-to-earth relationship, honest from center to circumference, between two essentially compatible human beings—with accent on human—who don't pose as perfect, who have the good sense to know the difference between movie-hokum and normal behavior, and whose bona fide mutual regard doesn't faint in the face of conflicting frailties and candid differences of opinion.

She Is Aiming at Total Dominance

YOUR THEORY seems to be that, overtly at least, you mustn't signify a mind, character, repertory of interests, etc., distinctively your own—lest cleavage result. Yet in trying to be your husband's echo, also his slave-girl, nurse and velvet-gloved general manager, your unconscious purpose is to dominate and possess him absolutely. He knows that, at least by instinct, and he resents it.

To get back on the right track, you need first to know why you are so lacking in valid self esteem that you feel driven to act a part to try to "hold" your husband,—which performance, alas, is actually blighting his interest. Thus firsthand psychiatric help seems indicated, to dig out the illuminating answers to that question.

As an interim measure, treat him casually as friend and companion, taken for granted. Don't hover and yearn, as to infant or idol. Apply your enthusiasm to other interests; give him a chance to live, move and breathe in a more impersonal partnership atmosphere, and perhaps his fondness for you will revive. M. H.

TOMORROW: Man's habit of inviting dinner guests without consulting his wife led to imbroglio last week, when she turned one couple away.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

ON WITH THE NEW—A whole duck can be easily cooked in the new 6-quart saucepan pressure cooker, first of its kind to reach the market. The fowl is browned in the saucepan first, then cooked under pressure. The process takes one third the normal time, saves fuel, cuts shrinkage, and tenderizes the meat. A 7-pound roast or a 6-pound chicken will also fit into this big new saucepan.

Ask Anne

Your Questions on Homemaking

I have an ecru rayon and cotton tablecloth on which a cola drink was spilled. The stain covers almost half the cloth. Can you tell me how to remove it? H. J.

Soak the cloth in lukewarm water and mild soapsuds, then wash in the usual way. The stain should come out without difficulty.

I spilled a small quantity of old, rather thick varnish on a piece of knitted underwear. What is the best way to remove it? T. R.

Saturate the stain with turpentine, then roll up the garment until the varnish softens. Sponge with additional turpentine, then launder.

I wonder if any readers of your column are interested in buying some extra pieces of "Silver Flute" sterling which I have to leave behind when I go abroad. S. F. J.

Readers interested in "Silver Flute" may write or telephone this column if they wish to get in touch with the owner of the silver.

We have a number of solid silver presentation platters brought back from abroad and such silver pieces as wine coolers and candelabra. Do you know of any lacquer finish that can be applied to prevent tarnishing? Is it possible to apply such a finish at home, or would it be better to have the work done by a professional? A. B. D.

The household goods section of at least one local department store sells a colorless solution especially made for coating little-used pieces of silver to retard tarnish. It can be successfully applied at home.

What is correct regarding acknowledgment of wedding invitations, wedding announcements, and birth announcements? B. N. M.

A wedding invitation to the church only requires no answer (unless the wedding is so small that the invitation is a personally written note). An invitation to the reception or breakfast is answered on the first page of a sheet of note paper and phrased formally, just as the wedding invitation is. In spite of the fact that it is written by hand, the spacing of the words must be just as though they were engraved. It is customary (but not obligatory) to send a present if you accept the invitation to the reception. A present is also usually sent when an invitation to the wedding by written note is received. A wedding announcement requires no reply and no present, although the latter are often sent, of course.

A suitable acknowledgment of a birth announcement is an informal note of congradulations. You're not obligated to send a gift, but may wish to do so, of you are a close friend of the infant's parents.

How can one keep baby's garments sparkling white without resorting to chlorine bleaches? Would use of bleach be harmful to the baby in any way? S. K. H.

Sun bleaching is, of course, the age-old method of whitening clothes. Bluing also gives them the appearance of whiteness, and one of the granulated soaps now contains a product called "solium" that's said to keep white clothes white. Bleach won't be harmful to the baby if it's thoroughly rinsed out of his clothes. It's a good idea to use the bleach in the soak water or first sudsing. Then you're sure of getting all the bleach out in subsequent washing and rinsings.

Can you give me any information on schools teaching candy making? A. C.

The only class in candy making we have been able to locate in Washington is an apprentice class for former GIs, taught by a local candy company. If you're interested in knowing more about this training, call Franklin 1120. The District public schools offer evening classes in home economics, which would include a little instruction in candy making. Call District 6000, Administrative Annex I, for information about these classes.

Preparing for Halloween

It's the perfect excuse for giving a mad party, too, and a hilarious way to start things off is with a Halloween jigsaw.

Cut out of colored paper such articles as pumpkins, skulls, cats, ghosts and brooms. Tear them in half and as guests arrive give one piece to each man and one to each girl.

Be-Witch Your Guests With Halloween Games

Partners will have fun finding one another and by the time they do, everybody will be acquainted.

Another trick is, Unwind the Spider Web, using cut-out symbols as above. This time, they're in two color, one for the men, one for the girls.

Tie a man's at one end of a string and a girl's at the other end and wind all the strings around table legs, under chairs, over bannisters and so on. As each guest arrives, give out a symbol and watch the entanglements before all the partners finally meet.

There are other games that call for balancing a pie plate, matching proverbs, team relays, word puzzles, magic tricks, in our Reader Service booklet No. 60. For Halloween and the holiday season ahead.

Send 25c (coin) for "Games For Good Parties" to (The Washington Post), Reader Service, 243 West 17th Street, New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address with zone, booklet title and No. 60.

John Cabot's Visit Coincides With Fete for Cabot Winners

By Marie McNair

It's by merest coincidence that John Moors Cabot, Counselor of our Embassy in Belgrade, will be in Washington when the Maria Moors Cabot award winners are to be honored.

Mr. and Mrs. Cabot came over from Yugoslavia for what was intended to be a brief leave. Instead, the State Department asked the diplomat to remain for conferences on the state of the country in which he is now serving. They're staying in Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell White's house in Georgetown while the Whites enjoy the autumn season at Barnstable, their home at Chester, Md.

The Maria Moors Cabot awards were established in 1939 by Dr. Godfrey Lowell Cabot of Boston, in memory of his wife. John Moors Cabot is a son.

Awarded annually by Columbia University, the Maria Moors Cabot prizes recognize outstanding achievements and services in the field of journalism by distinguished editors, publishers and writers in the American Republics.

Dr. Carlos Davila, former Chilean Ambassador to the United States holds a gold medal for a 1941 award. A political exile after being ousted from the Presidency of his country, Dr. Davilla went back to his old profession—journalism. He established the Editors Press Service, a news and feature syndicate in New York, covering the newspaper fields in Latin America.

A luncheon for this year's winners will be held in the Hall of the Americas, Pan American Union Building on Thursday, November 13. Hosts will be the director general of the Pan American Union, Dr. Alberto Lleras and Senora de Lleras.

Dr. Lleras is himself a prominent Columbian journalist. He's also a former President of his country.

TOWN TOPICS: A new debutante to add to the group this season is Miss Jane Hickenlooper, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Bourke Hickenlooper, who'll make definite plans for her party when she returns with her parents in November.

Also taking part in the debutante festivities will be Miss Ann Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Carter. Ann will entertain the season's debutantes at luncheon on December 22 at the Carlton.

The English language comes hard with Mme. Jutila, wife of the Finnish Minister. She relieves herself of all conversational obligations at parties by repeating the sentence "I do not speak English, but I am going to learn." This she says without the slightest trace of accent.

Mrs. Albert J. Bowley, widow of the general, and her brother, Thomas Ball of Pasadena, Calif., who is visiting her, are spending the weekend with her sister, Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, at her home near Wilmington.

Virginia-born Mrs. Bowley and Mrs. duPont both have country places in their native State. Mrs. duPont's is Ditchley and Edge Hill, Mrs. Bowley's house, is close by. Both are on the Chesapeake Bay. Just back from a visit to Mrs. Bowley at Edge Hill are Gen. and Mrs. John N. Greely and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stone, old friends of Mrs. Bowley from Ohio.

Miss Rita Ann Rossilli, whose engagement to William Lloyd Bondurant, jr., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aurelio Rossilli. The prospective bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bondurant, attended Takoma Academy. No date has been set for the wedding

Capital's Dimunitive Artist Is Nominee for 'Best-Dressed'

By Peggy Preston

LOOKS like Washington may have another candidate for the best dressed women in America list. She is tiny (just over 5 feet) Artist Greta Kempton.

The New York Dress Institute, which annually conducts a poll to select the 10 best dressed women, mentions Miss Kempton as a possible candidate in a recent release.

Washington knows Miss Kempton primarily as a first-rate artist. In private life she is Mrs. Michael McNamara, wife of a sugar executive, and for the past several years they have divided their time between a New York town house and a hotel apartment here.

Paints Capital Leaders

She has completed commissions for oil portraits of many of the Capital's most distinguished officials. Her latest canvas is of President Truman, and at present she is working on one of Margaret in her concert debut dress. She has also done the Secretary of the Treasury, John Snyder, and his daughter, Drucie.

Miss Kempton told this reporter recently that it is important for a woman to choose her clothing carefully when she sits for a portrait. "Clothes can make a picture as well as the woman," she maintains.

She says that when Miss Truman walked into her studio to pose she was ill at ease until Miss Kempton thought of asking her to don her concert debut dress. From that moment on the sittings were successful, according to Miss Kempton, for the dress gave the President's daughter immense confidence.

Miss Kempton, a diminutive brunette of French-Spanish ancestry, loves platform soles (to give her height); slim black frocks and festive hats by Walter Florell. Her great passion is for fur coats, however, and she takes special pride in a white mink which is one of four or five such garments in the world.

THERE'S some shocking news in stockings. Having covered up our legs to within a few inches of the ankle, we are now supposed to make an all-out effort to accentuate the remaining bare areas. It's to be done with stockings in shades which may range from pale pink to deepest black.

Well Heeled Means That

And it won't stop there. The term "well-heeled" refers to more than the condition of your bankbook in this year's fashion lingo. With only a minimum of leg in the shadow of the dipping hemline, the decorous heel has become a high spot of the silhouette.

Heels done in an array of colors—blue, green, black and brown—are a revival of an old fashion just as are so many other items in this season of resurrections.

Taken from another past era are the clocks and ankle adornments being readied for Christmas selling. Some of the new stockings add heel interest with hand-painted flowers, strawberries and butterflies.

If you're really bold about this hosiery business, you can wear your name across your ankle or a glistening set of rhinestones.

And then—guess what! The "new" long hemline has brought back the knee-length stocking, in sheer nylon with a soft plastic band. We wore those in 1936—remember?

Staying Bright

Frequent cleaning of brass door knobs, knockers and door bells can be avoided if, after they have been polished, they are rubbed with a little furniture cream, then gone over with a soft dry cloth.

Invitation

I like to be invited to . . . An evening with a friend . . . And many folks are lavish with . . . The offers they extend . . . But all too often they present . . . Their courtesies to me . . . Without a special welcome to . . . Their hospitality . . . Their words are very general . . . And never contemplate . . . A definite or tentative . . . Or any kind of date . . . They simply say, "Come over when . . . You have the time to spare" . . . And thus they leave their friendly thoughts . . . Suspended in the air . . . I like to be invited but . . . I also like to know . . . At least approximately when . . . I may prepare to go.

For Cleaner Clothes

Two or three times a year the rope clothesline and clothespins should be placed in the wash boiler and washed in sudsy water. Rinse in clear hot water and let dry in the sunshine. This will prevent ugly stains on the clothes from neglected lines and pins.

S-t-r-e-t-c-h to Whittle Down Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

According to figure charts, 25 inches is the correct waistline measure for a woman 5 feet tall. And by the charts, one-half inch is allowable on the waist for each added inch of height. Well, it's a neat theory, but it doesn't run true to form, so to speak.

To my notion, it would be more accurate to have a range of 24 to 26 inches for the basic 5 feet of height; around 24 inches for the slight frame, 25 inches for the average frame and 26 inches plus for the girl with the stocky frame.

I have an excellent reason for varying this rule, my own waist being 26 inches right this minute and I'm just a breath over 5 feet tall—stretched. When a gal is short-waisted, it's nip and tuck to keep the waist fined down, as well I know.

Use Stretching Bar

Still another rule is to check the waist measure against what it was when you were 21. Allow for a 3-inch margin, then aim to slim off the extra inches. For example, if you had a slim 23-inch waistline when you waltzed down the aisle, and your waist is now an ample 32 inches, that is too big a difference. You would look and feel wonderfully fit—younger and peppier—by whittling off 4 inches. In order to slim the middle you might have to take off 10 pounds of excess weight too.

Just a little stretching every day works wonders. In fact, it was very thoughtful of nature to make anything as easy as stretching so beautifully slimming. And stretching gives such a lift. It lifts the chest, puts tone in the middle muscles and even counteracts the downward tug of gravity.

Allow for Age

Stretching from a horizontal bar adjusted in a doorway is even more effective. One chubby-waisted girl I know had one in a handy doorway and took a swing or two on it every time she passed. Well, little by little she slimmed 3 inches off the middle measurement. Nice going. A stretching bar should be placed so it is within easy reach standing on tiptoes.

But if you don't have a stretching bar handy, here's a thorough-going stretcher.

Position: Lie face down, flat on stomach, with elbows drawn up under your chest, forearms and palms of hands flat on floor, legs straight down.

Movement: Raise right leg and left arm and stretch in a diagonal line . . . stretching arm forward and leg in opposite direction . . . pull. Try it again, and feel the pull of the waistline muscles on one side and the in-pull of the large waistline muscles on the other side. Then repeat the diagonal stretch, using the right arm and the left leg, and pull. This is a most effective stretch.

Comfort at the Table

Remember when seating guests at your dining room table that 20 inches is the minimum allowance of space for each person and 25 to 30 inches is better. It quite spoils the dinner to be so crowded that one is conscious of every movement when eating.

An Ill-Bred Visitor

If someone has left their chewing gum parked on your carefully cared for furniture, rub the marks left by it with a cloth moistened with olive oil. All traces of the gum will wipe away.

Heels done in an array of colors—blue, green, black and brown—are a revival of an old fashion just as are so many other items in this season of resurrections.

Taken from another past era are the clocks and ankle adornments being readied for Christmas selling. Some of the new stockings add heel interest with hand-painted flowers, strawberries and butterflies.

If you're really bold about this hosiery business, you can wear your name across your ankle or a glistening set of rhinestones.

And then—guess what! The "new" long hemline has brought back the knee-length stocking, in sheer nylon with a soft plastic band. We wore those in 1936—remember?

Staying Bright

Frequent cleaning of brass door knobs, knockers and door bells can be avoided if, after they have been polished, they are rubbed with a little furniture cream, then gone over with a soft dry cloth.

Invitation

I like to be invited to . . . An evening with a friend . . . And many folks are lavish with . . . The offers they extend . . . But all too often they present . . . Their courtesies to me . . . Without a special welcome to . . . Their hospitality . . . Their words are very general . . . And never contemplate . . . A definite or tentative . . . Or any kind of date . . . They simply say, "Come over when . . . You have the time to spare" . . . And thus they leave their friendly thoughts . . . Suspended in the air . . . I like to be invited but . . . I also like to know . . . At least approximately when . . . I may prepare to go.

Two or three times a year the rope clothesline and clothespins should be placed in the wash boiler and washed in sudsy water. Rinse in clear hot water and let dry in the sunshine. This will prevent ugly stains on the clothes from neglected lines and pins.

S-t-r-e-t-c-h to Whittle Down Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

According to figure charts, 25 inches is the correct waistline measure for a woman 5 feet tall. And by the charts, one-half inch is allowable on the waist for each added inch of height. Well, it's a neat theory, but it doesn't run true to form, so to speak.

To my notion, it would be more accurate to have a range of 24 to 26 inches for the basic 5 feet of height; around 24 inches for the slight frame, 25 inches for the average frame and 26 inches plus for the girl with the stocky frame.

I have an excellent reason for varying this rule, my own waist being 26 inches right this minute and I'm just a breath over 5 feet tall—stretched. When a gal is short-waisted, it's nip and tuck to keep the waist fined down, as well I know.

Use Stretching Bar

Still another rule is to check the waist measure against what it was when you were 21. Allow for a 3-inch margin, then aim to slim off the extra inches. For example, if you had a slim 23-inch waistline when you waltzed down the aisle, and your waist is now an ample 32 inches, that is too big a difference. You would look and feel wonderfully fit—younger and peppier—by whittling off 4 inches.

In order to slim the middle you might have to take off 10 pounds of excess weight too.

Just a little stretching every day works wonders. In fact, it was very thoughtful of nature to make anything as easy as stretching so beautifully slimming. And stretching gives such a lift. It lifts the chest, puts tone in the middle muscles and even counteracts the downward tug of gravity.

Allow for Age

Stretching from a horizontal bar adjusted in a doorway is even more effective. One chubby-waisted girl I know had one in a handy doorway and took a swing or two on it every time she passed. Well, little by little she slimmed 3 inches off the middle measurement. Nice going. A stretching bar should be placed so it is within easy reach standing on tiptoes.

But if you don't have a stretching bar handy, here's a thoroughgoing stretcher.

Position: Lie face down, flat on stomach, with elbows drawn up under your chest, forearms and palms of hands flat on floor, legs straight down.

Movement: Raise right leg and left arm and stretch in a diagonal line . . . stretching arm forward and leg in opposite direction . . . pull. Try it again, and feel the pull of the waistline muscles on one side and the in-pull of the large waistline muscles on the other side. Then repeat the diagonal stretch, using the right arm and the left leg, and pull. This is a most effective stretch.

Va. Farmers Could Raise Beavers—But

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Nature's own builder, the beaver, has a place in agriculture, but keeping him in it presents a problem.

H. S. Mosby, director of the Virginia Cooperative Wildfire Station here, says that beavers are found in 20 Virginia counties and that, if they are kept in their place, they may eventually prove profitable to farmers.

The beaver's place is a wooded area with a stream. He is a nuisance around cropped lands, especially orchards and cornfields.

The profit angle in encouraging beavers to live happily, build dams, and beget little beavers, Mosby said, is in the beaver fur, which brings from $25 to $50 per prime pelt.

He hastened to add that he would not recommend encouraging beavers in situations where their dams might flood expensive pasture lands or back up water that would extend over roads.

At present, however, there is one hitch to the beavers-for-profit plan. The Virginia Game Commission prohibits beaver trapping, on penalty of a fine.

The beaver was virtually extinct in the State until the commission began reintroducing the valuable fur-bearer about 20 years ago. Mosby believes it will take another 10 years at least for the beaver population to reach a point that justifies a trapping season.

U. S. Will Safeguard Tobacco Sale Figures

Danville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—In an effort to preclude reported padding of tobacco market sales figures the Department of Agriculture will obtain official figures on individual tobacco markets and release them for publication, Secretary Clinton P. Anderson desclosed today.

Anderson's decision was made, known in a letter to the Danville, Va., Register, which complained editorially that unofficial figures on average prices and poundage obtained from market supervisors often were "padded" to entice farmers to bring tobacco to market.

Several market supervisors denied the charges, but others in the industry said the practice had been general over a long period.

Green Light Seen for CCC Tobacco Loans

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Department of Agriculture's tobacco branch director, Charles Gage, said today he believed there were no serious objections to a proposal that the Commodity Credit Corporation underwrite British tobacco purchases on American markets.

Gage expressed the opinion during a recess in a conference among British and American tobacco officials with Agriculture Department representatives on a plan that might set up the CCC as Britain's market representative and thus pave the way for a price revival on the flagging flue-cured markets.

Tobacco officials were in general agreement that adoption of such a support plan would make possible an early reopening—probably a week from tomorrow—of Old Belt markets in Virginia and North Carolina, which will suspend indefinitely after Monday's sales.

One phase of the problem discussed at the session here—which was described as harmonious—was the cost of the underwriting plan. Conjecture was that the amount would be somewhere around 25 million dollars.

U. S. Acts to Prevent Padding of Sales Figures

Danville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—In an effort to preclude the reported padding of tobacco market sales figures, the Department of Agriculture will obtain official figures on individual tobacco markets and release them for publication, Secretary Clinton P. Anderson disclosed today.

Anderson's decision was made known in a letter to the Danville (Va.) Register, which complained editorially that unofficial figures on average prices and poundage obtained from market supervisors often were "padded" to entice farmers to bring tobacco to their markets.

Several market supervisors heatedly denied the "padding" charges, but others in the industry said the practice had been general over a long period of time.

The Agriculture Secretary said in part, in his letter:

"This department has employes on the tobacco markets who are probably in position to furnish the correct information for the market, obtained from the books of the various warehousemen.

"We see no objection to this information being made available to the press and instructions will be issued accordingly."

Mine Operator Escapes Death in Dynamite Blast

Pennington Gap, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Hersell Kelly, operator of the Kelly Mines at St. Charles, Va., narrowly escaped death today when a charge of dynamite, placed in his parked truck, exploded with a roar heard a quarter of a mile away.

The truck parked in front of his Kelly was sleeping at his home, the truck parked in front of the house when the charge went off, shattering his bedroom window and knocking him unconscious. Parts of the truck were found on top of the Penn Lee Commissary, 20 feet away.

Clint Charles, St. Charles policemtn, said the dynamite probablye was connected with the starter of the truck, but that it apparently exploded prematurely.

Kelly is an associate in the coal business with his father, M. D. Kelly, former St. Charles bank president and owner of the Kelly Mines.

Dedication Rites Mark Area Services

Dedication services and observances of "Reformation Sunday" held the spotlight in Greater Washington area Protestant churches yesterday.

Also commemorated were "Navy Sunday" and "World Order Sunday." The latter observance was sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, whose annual message stressed the importance of food conservation to world peace.

"Reformation Sunday" marked the 430th anniversary of Martin Luther's posting of the 95 theses on the Castle Church door at Wittenberg, Germany, signaling the start of the Protestant Reformation movement.

Memorial Windows Dedicated

In other church ceremonies yesterday, memorial windows were dedicated at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Wisconsin near Massachusetts ave. nw.; Trinity Methodist Church, 5th st. and Seward square se., and Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, 20th and G sts. nw.

Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, dedicated its new organ, and Rockville Christian Church dedicated a memorial plaque to its servicemen. Trinity Presbyterians laid the cornerstone for their new edifice at 16th and Ingelwood sts., north Arlington.

At Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, the Rev. Gilbert A. Phillips was installed as Arlington pastor for All Souls' Unitarian Church, Washington, D. C., at services at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School. Arlington Presbyterian Church opened a $55,000 building fund drive as the first step toward erecting an addition to the present structure at Columbia Pike and South Lincoln st.

Material Power Not Enough

The Rev. O. V. T. Chamberlain, former Army chaplain in Burma, advised a "Navy Sunday" congregation at historic Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, that "we are going to need more than material power to be happy."

The assistant pastor of Christ Church said:

"We need power in personal relationships. We need power to batter down hate and prejudice—to build understanding—to forgive and help—to establish justice—to inculcate goodness—to reform instead of condemning—to overcome ourselves—to gain inward peace of mind and to reach out to God and find him."

Four stained-glass windows were dedicated at St. Alban's Church in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Nourse, Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln E. Pitsnogle and Mrs. Vergia Ann Lanvoight.

The windows presented at Trinity Church were in memory of Mary Elizabeth Smallwood, Mary Belle Smallwood and Lemuel Vernon Smallwood. Those at Concordia Church were given in memory of Charles Coomes and Hulda Imhof Coomes.

Va. Farmers Could Raise Beavers—But

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Nature's own builder, the beaver, has a place in agriculture, but keeping him in it presents a problem.

H. S. Mosby, director of the Virginia Cooperative Wildfire Station here, says that beavers are found in 20 Virginia counties and that, if they are kept in their place, they may eventually prove profitable to farmers.

The beaver's place is a wooded area with a stream. He is a nuisance around cropped lands, especially orchards and cornfields.

The profit angle in encouraging Beavers to live happily, build dams, and beget little beavers, Mosby said, is in the beaver fur, which brings from $25 to $50 per prime pelt.

He hastened to add that he would not recommend encouraging beavers in situations where their dams might flood expensive pasture lands or back up water that would extend over roads.

At present, however, there is one hitch to the beavers-for-profit plan. The Virginia Game Commission prohibits beaver trapping, on penalty of a fine.

The beaver was virtually extinct in the State until the commission began reintroducing the valuable fur-bearer about 20 years ago. Mosby believes it will take another 10 years at least for the beaver population to reach a point that justifies a trapping season.

U. S. Will Safeguard Tobacco Sale Figures

Danville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—In an effort to preclude reported padding of tobacco market sales figures the Department of Agriculture will obtain official figures on individual tobacco markets and release them for publication, Secretary Clinton P. Anderson desclosed today.

Anderson's decision was made, known in a letter to the Danville, Va., Register, which complained editorially that unofficial figures on average prices and poundage obtained from market supervisors often were "padded" to entice farmers to bring tobacco to market.

Several market supervisors denied the charges, but others in the industry said the practice had been general over a long period.

He said that many people would be willing to cooperate in such a program if they knew what steps to take. He stressed the fact that health conditions in the county are only "fair."

Green Light Seen for CCC Tobacco Loans

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Department of Agriculture's tobacco branch director, Charles Gage, said today he believed there were no serious objections to a proposal that the Commodity Credit Corporation underwrite British tobacco purchases on American markets.

Gage expressed the opinion during a recess in a conference among British and American tobacco officials with Agriculture Department representatives on a plan that might set up the CCC as Britain's market representative and thus pave the way for a price revival on the flagging flue-cured markets.

Tobacco officials were in general agreement that adoption of such a support plan would make possible an early reopening—probably a week from tomorrow—of Old Belt markets in Virginia and North Carolina, which will suspend indefinitely after Monday's sales.

One phase of the problem discussed at the session here—which was described as harmonious—was the cost of the underwriting plan. Conjecture was that the amount would be somewhere around 25 million dollars.

U. S. Acts to Prevent Padding of Sales Figures

Danville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—In an effort to preclude the reported padding of tobacco market sales figures, the Department of Agriculture will obtain official figures on individual tobacco markets and release them for publication, Secretary Clinton P. Anderson disclosed today.

Anderson's decision was made known in a letter to the Danville (Va.) Register, which complained editorialy that unofficial figures on average prices and poundage obtained from market supervisors often were "padded" to entice farmers to bring tobacco to their markets.

Several market supervisors heatedly denied the "padding" charges, but others in the industry said the practice had been general over a long period of time.

The Agriculture Secretary said in part, in his letter:

"This department has employes on the tobacco markets who are probably in position to furnish the correct information for the market, obtained from the books of the various warehousemen.

"We see no objection to this information being made available to the press and instructions will be issued accordingly."

Wednesday the Woodridge P-TA will hold its fall luncheon for the pupils, parents and friends at noon at the school.

Mine Operator Escapes Death in Dynamite Blast

Pennington Gap, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Hersell Kelly, operator of the Kelly Mines at St. Charles, Va., narrowly escaped death today when a charge of dynamite, placed in his parked truck, exploded with a roar heard a quarter of a mile away.

The truck parked in front of his Kelly was sleeping at his home, the truck parked in front of the house when the charge went off, shattering his bedroom window and knocking him unconscious. Parts of the truck were found on top of the Penn Lee Commissary, 20 feet away.

Clint Charles, St. Charles policemtn, said the dynamite probablye was connected with the starter of the truck, but that it apparently exploded prematurely.

Kelly is an associate in the coal business with his father, M. D. Kelly, former St. Charles bank president and owner of the Kelly Mines.

Dedication Rites Mark Area Services

Dedication services and observances of "Reformation Sunday" held the spotlight in Greater Washington area Protestant churches yesterday.

Also commemorated were "Navy Sunday" and "World Order Sunday." The latter observance was sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, whose annual message stressed the importance of food conservation to world peace.

"Reformation Sunday" marked the 430th anniversary of Martin Luther's posting of the 95 theses on the Castle Church door at Wittenberg, Germany, signaling the start of the Protestant Reformation movement.

Memorial Windows Dedicated

In other church ceremonies yesterday, memorial windows were dedicated at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Wisconsin near Massachusetts ave. nw.; Trinity Methodist Church, 5th st. and Seward square se., and Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, 20th and G sts. nw.

Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, dedicated its new organ, and Rockville Christian Church dedicated a memorial plaque to its servicemen. Trinity Presbyterians laid the cornerstone for their new edifice at 16th and Ingelwood sts., north Arlington.

At Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, the Rev. Gilbert A. Phillips was installed as Arlington pastor for All Souls' Unitarian Church, Washington, D. C., at services at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School. Arlington Presbyterian Church opened a $55,000 building fund drive as the first step toward erecting an addition to the present structure at Columbia Pike and South Lincoln st.

Material Power Not Enough

The Rev. O. V. T. Chamberlain, former Army chaplain in Burma, advised a "Navy Sunday" congregation at historic Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, that "we are going to need more than material power to be happy."

The assistant pastor of Christ Church said:

"We need power in personal relationships. We need power to batter down hate and prejudice—to build understanding—to forgive and help—to establish justice—to inculcate goodness—to reform instead of condemning—to overcome ourselves—to gain inward peace of mind and to reach out to God and find him."

Four stained-glass windows were dedicated at St. Alban's Church in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Nourse, Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln E. Pitsnogle and Mrs. Vergia Ann Lanvoight.

The windows presented at Trinity Church were in memory of Mary Elizabeth Smallwood, Mary Belle Smallwood and Lemuel Vernon Smallwood. Those at Concordia Church were given in memory of Charles Coomes and Hulda Imhof Coomes.

The proposal was made by the members of the St. Marys County Fair Association, headed by Joseph A. Mattingly, Heath Steele, jr., and B. Duke. The fair was held at Camp Calvert last month.

The commissioners, who are in favor of the proposal, have asked their legal department, headed by John H. Briscoe, to investigate the matter. They said State legislation might be necessary to give the county the right to make the transaction, and asked their attorney to give an opinion on the proposal.

Rental Policies Revised, Vets Will Get Apartments

A few days ago I began to receive complaints from veterans who were waiting for apartments at Fairlington and McLean Gardens.

They had put their names on the waiting list more than a year ago, and had been told that their apartments would finally be available this month.

It was to be the end of a long ordeal. Many had been forced to find out-of-town housing for their families while they waited for their turn to come.

But on October 10 Fairlington and McLean Gardens were sold by the Government to a private company—The Fairmac Corp. And the veterans were told that the new owners might throw out the whole waiting list, and pick their tenants in their own way. Meantime, newcomers were getting vacated apartments.

I checked these complaints with Col. Waldron E. Leonard, director of the Veterans Service Center. He told me that he had many more cases on his desk than I had heard about, and that he hadn't been able to get a satisfactory solution from the new owners.

The trouble was that William A. Ziegler, who ran the projects for the Government, was about to go to work in a similar capacity for the Fairmac Corp. But his new job wouldn't begin until November 1.

Meantime veterans had sent for their families on the strength of previous promises, but had no place to house them.

When I took the complaints to Mr. Ziegler, he assured me that the new owners wouldn't be unreasonable, and that their only interest was to make sure they were getting desirable tenants—a right exercised by all property owners.

Two days later I heard from Mr. Ziegler again. "The rental policy of the new owners has now been clarified," he informed me. "The old waiting list will be retained as the basis for allocating apartments."

He added that if any hardships have been worked through the temporary confusion occasioned by the changeover, he'd give them personal attention.

Veterans who were previously turned away by the announcement "we may scrap the whole list" are invited to go back again, and get their affairs straightened out. Ziegler says:

"We recognize that we have a moral obligation to these previous applicants, and to the community in which we're going to do business. All we ask is the right to pick desirable tenants—from the old list, in the old order of precedence."

ENGLISH SPOKEN HERE?

M. P. (it stands for Mary Patricia) Flynn of 2501 Q st. nw., sends along two hilarious ads culled from recent editions.

The first offers: "Cotton Pajamas for Men Worth Much More, $2.95"—and, of course, Mary Pat wonders how much those men are really worth.

The second says: "Charming brick home, built-in garage, large closets; will not last long. $17,900."

Will it at least last as long as the mortgage?

HOW'S THAT AGAIN

It happened at the Georgetown-NYU game Friday. The officials were stepping off a 15-yard penalty against Georgetown, and their signal was "backfield in motion." In the stands, the following conversation ensued:

He: That's strange.

She: What's strange?

He: The signal indicates that a backfield man was in motion, and the penalty for that is only 5 yards. But Georgetown is being penalized 15 yards.

She: Maybe three Georgetown backs were in motion, dear.

PERSONAL NOTES

C. J. Nesser, 909 Investment Building: Maybe it's akin to those incongruous South American names, like Jaime Miguel O'Hara.

"Seems like a pretty active ghost," comments District Liner Town.

Yes he does. And I might add—a fellow of regular habits.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

People Support 'Friendship Train'

By Drew Pearson

One criticism that used to be leveled at the Roosevelt Administration was that the Nation's leadership came entirely from Washington. The people of the USA, it was said, got into the bad habit of sitting on their hands, doing nothing for themselves.

Whether true or false, some healthy signs are now apparent that the American people are quite capable of acting on their own.

One of them is the Friendship Train. With no help from the Government whatsoever—though with hearty White House approval—it has now been decided that the Friendship Train will definitely roll.

It will leave Los Angeles on or about November 7 with an engine, a caboose and a boxcar to collect food from the plain people of America for the stricken people of western Europe. The first stop will be Bakersfield, where it is hoped another boxcar will be added, and so on across the continent.

Judging from the response from all sorts of people—including railroad presidents, housewives, farmers—a thundering demonstration of the generosity of America will roll across the great plains, showing the people of Europe that help in their hour of need comes not from closed-door diplomatic conferences, but from the heart of America.

And most important of all is the fact that the Friendship Train is almost entirely spontaneous. It is the sort of thing that couldn't happen in Russia, because in Russia it is only a handful of men who decide whether wheat shall move to France, and then go out and collect what they need from the Russian peasants.

And when the Russian people are able to start a spontaneous friendly movement such as this, then there will no longer be any danger of war between our two countries. Also, if the people of western Europe get the full significance of this American generosity, there won't be any doubt as to whose side they will be on.

That, of course, is one big reason for the Friendship Train, and why newsreels of the train will be shown in European theaters, and why the French and Italian embassies are working on the idea of meeting the food shipments on the other side with two European "friendship trains" to carry the cargoes from the French and Italian seaports through Italy and France.

To get just a partial idea of how all sorts of Americans are cooperating to put across the Friendship Train, here are some of the things that are happening.

Dan Tobin of the Teamsters Union is sending a trained crew of teamsters to help pack boxcars ahead of the train's arrival. A. T. Mercier, president of the Southern Pacific, urged that the train start at Los Angeles instead of San Francisco in order to get a better coverage of California. His railroad is carrying the train free, as are all the other railroads.

Credit for this goes to G. F. Ashby, head of the Union Pacific, R. L. Williams, head of the Chicago & Northwestern; M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania, and G. Metzman, head of the New York Central. When William Faricy, president of the Association of American Railroads, put the idea up to them, they didn't hesitate a minute.

Harry Warner of Warner Brothers and George Skouras of Twentieth Century-Fox are also contributing their time and genius, plus trained personnel to help organize the train. Ed O'Neil of the Farm Bureau Federation, Albert Goss of the National Grange, James Patton of the Farmers Union, S. Kendrick Guernsey, head of Rotary; Charles Armstrong, head of Kiwanis; Taylor Cole and John Ben Sheppard of the Junior Chambers of Commerce, and Fred Smith, head of the Lions Clubs, together with many others are helping with the collection of food through their local organizations along the train's route.

Route Direct

Since time is important and since it would be impossible to collect food from every section of the U. S. A., the route has to be straight across the country.

Local Friendship Train committees will have the details regarding the best way to prepare boxcars in advance of the train's arrival.

Also, the food most needed in Europe and which will be easiest to ship is: Buckwheat, wheat flour, dried beans, dried peas, sugar, evaporated milk, macaroni and spaghetti.

Unfortunately, anything packed in glass cannot be shipped. Also, most canned goods contain so much water that accepting them for overseas shipment is not economical.

Those are just a few of the ABC's of launching a project which will have plenty of headaches but which can become a truly great gesture of friendship to the people of western Europe.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

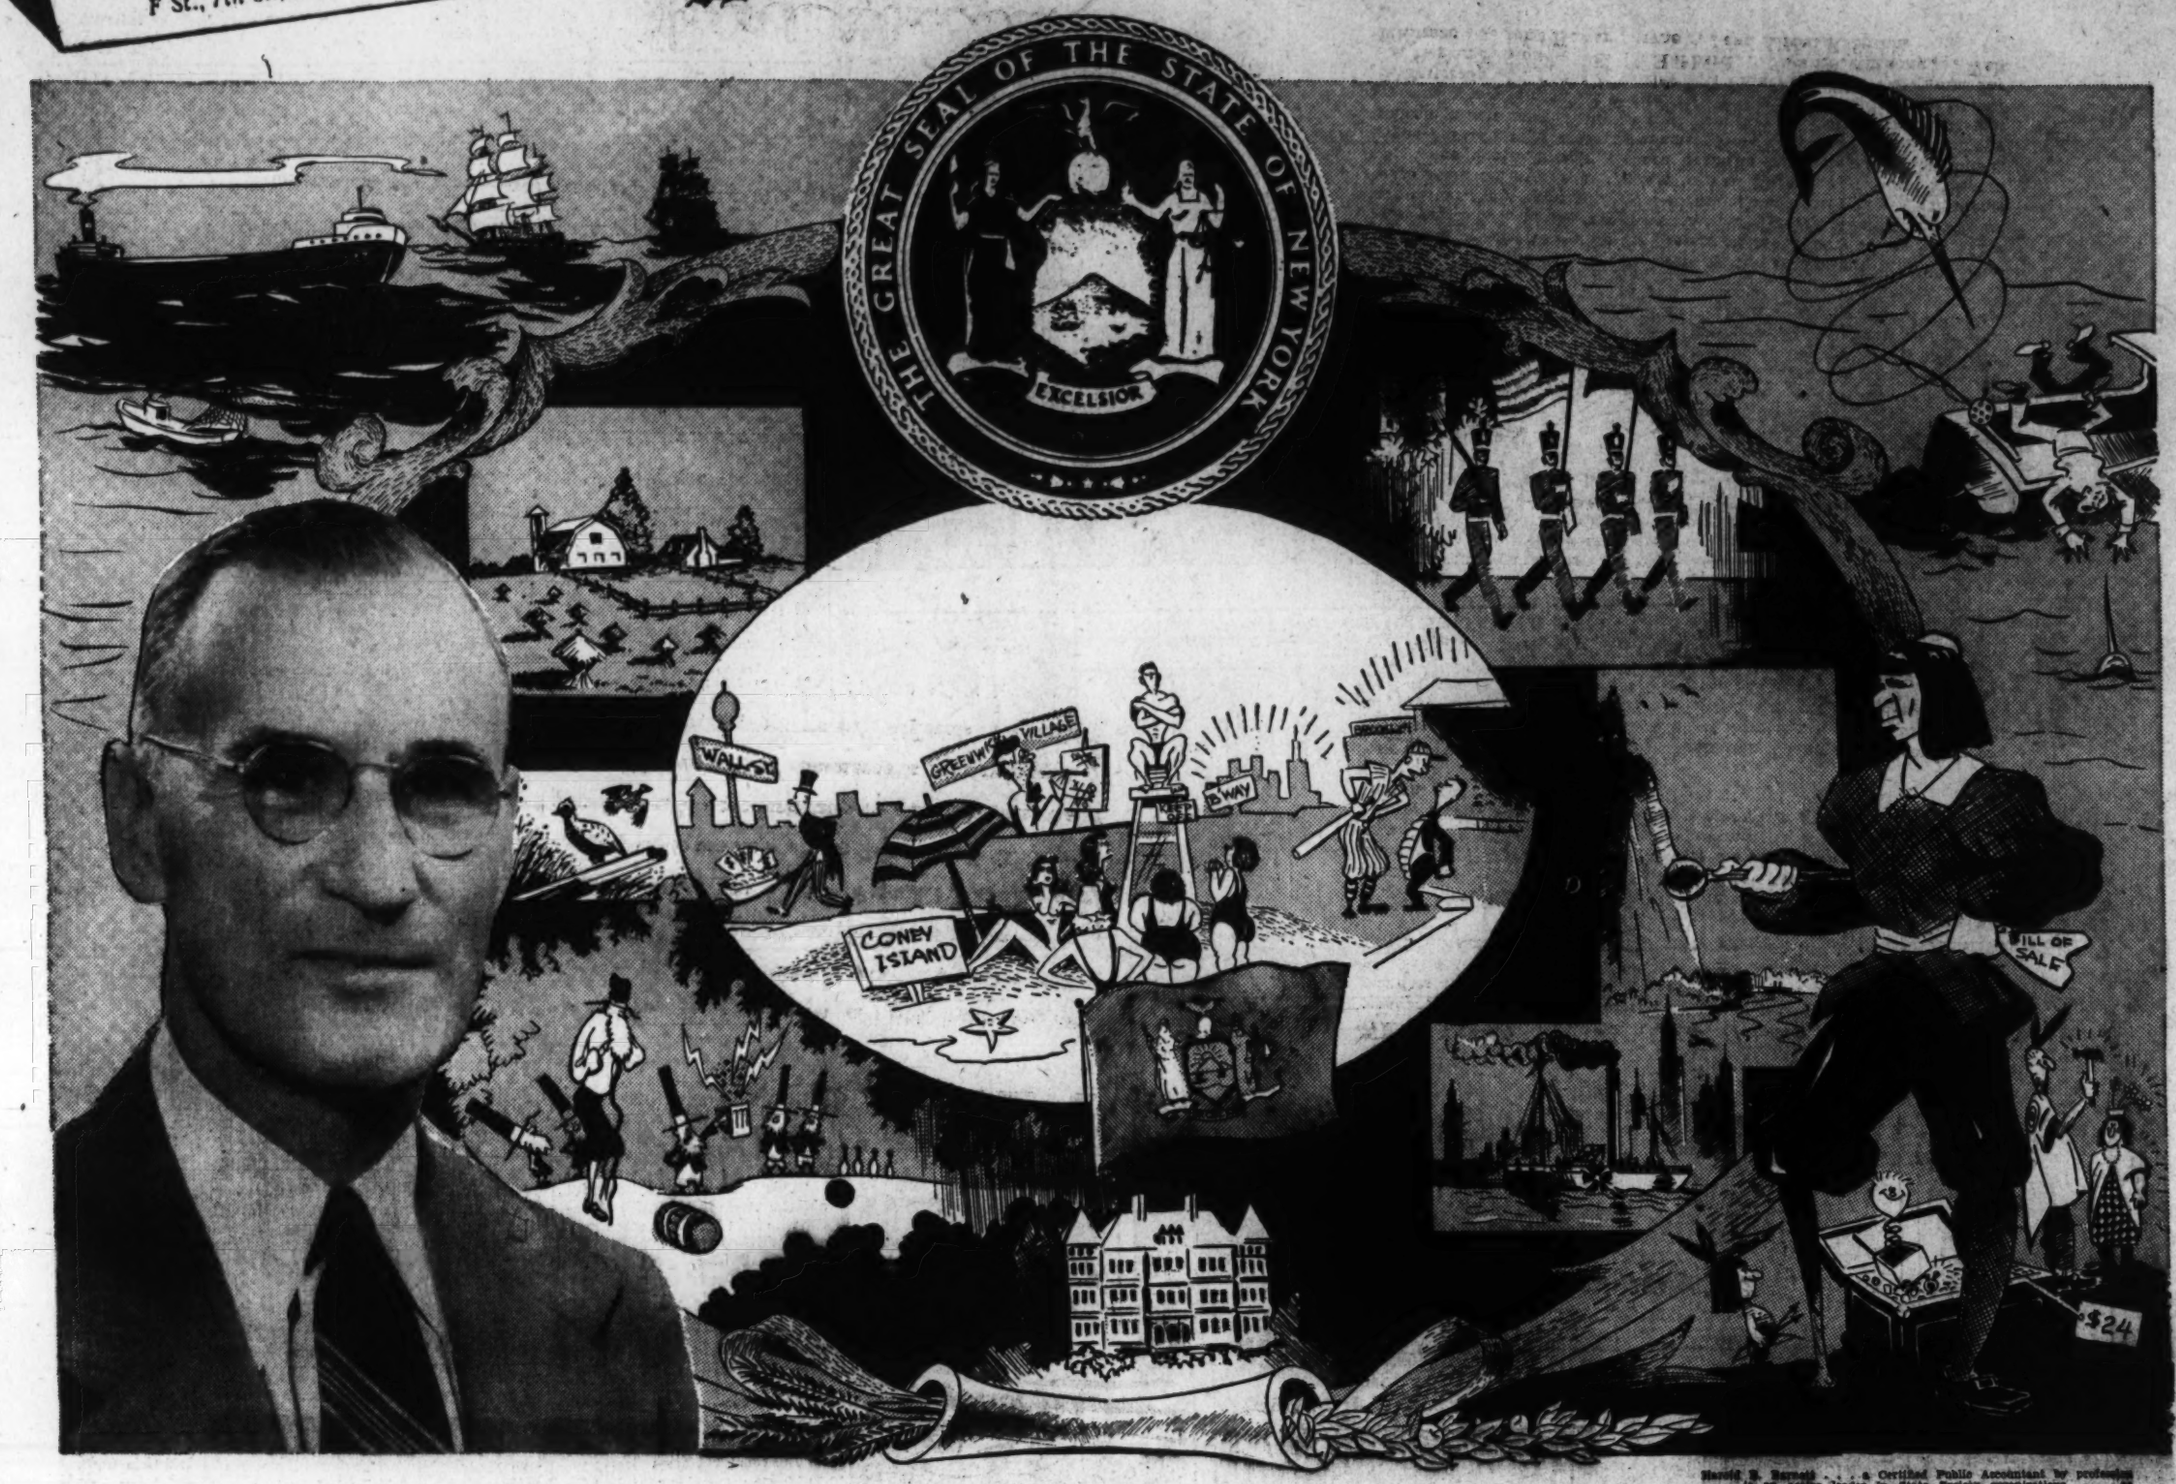
A GREAT STORE IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL



Harold B. Barnett . . . a Certified Public Accountant by profession . . . is an active leader in State Society organizations . . . is President of the New York State Society . . . and Chairman of the Conference of State Society Officers.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

NEW YORK . . . the empire state

Called "The Seat of the Empire by George Washington in 1784, by reason of the imperial scope of her harbors, waterways and fertile soil, from both a military and a commercial viewpoint, New York acknowledged the compliment by adopting in 1819 her well-known title, "The Empire State." New York's growth during the past 300 years, until she now stands first among all States of the Union in wealth and population, is a modern miracle almost beyond description. Her leadership in manufacturing and commerce is acknowledged. She stands high as a producer of agricultural products and minerals and leads the Nation in transportation lines. New York is famed for her educational advantages; her famous colleges and universities include Columbia, New York University, Fordham, Colgate, the City College of New York, Syracuse, Cornell and Vassar. New York City, the metropolis of the State, is also the largest city in the world. Besides being the wealthiest city in modern civilization, it is today the cultural and artistic center. Its stores, theaters, hotels, skyscrapers, subways, beautiful buildings, parks and harbor are but a few of the attractions that lure people to "Gotham" from all corners of the globe. To you who have been in the Empire State, no invitation to return for further enjoyment of her beauty and pleasures is necessary. But to you who have not yet seen "The Miracle of the New World," may I, through the courtesy of The Hecht Company, humbly suggest that you replace Horace Greeley's famous advice with a more modern slogan—"See New York First!"

Harold B. Barnett

President, New York State Society.

NEW YORK . . . An "empire" of industry and finance . . . transportation and agriculture. New York is a leader in the Nation's business and manufacturing . . . and the number one market place of the Nation. Yet New York is not a State for all work and no play . . . her mountain, lake and seashore areas are favorite resort centers.

NEW YORK . . . With a concentration of manufacturing communities along the Hudson River and Erie Canal—Buffalo . . . Rochester . . . Troy . . . Utica . . . Syracuse . . . and Albany: The State is one of the U. S. leaders in the production of milk and cheese . . . potatoes, onions and cabbages . . . and second in grape growing in the Nation.

NEW YORK . . . Whose Manhattan Island . . . according to legend, was purchased by Peter Minuet from the Mantauk Indians for $24 worth of trinkets . . . is the nucleus of the country's greatest metropolis. New York City is the world's busiest seaport . . . first in U. S. manufacturing . . . and financial capital of the world. LaGuardia Field is the world's greatest commercial airport. Little Old New York has the tallest buildings in the world . . . from the Empire State Building, one can view the entire panorama of the sprawling city. New York, city of glamour, is the country's leading convention and tourist city . . . with its luxurious hotels . . . Coney Island . . . Central Park . . . Greenwich Village . . . the Great White Way . . . and a cultural center of fine art galleries, great symphony orchestras, and the world-famous Metropolitan Opera. In Brooklyn, the Dodgers are the local heroes . . . in the Bronx and Manhattan, it's the Giants and the Yankees.

NEW YORK . . . Where the man-made wonders of the big cities contrast with scenic wonders created by Nature. Favorite spots include the ancient Adirondacks . . . and the Catskills, where Rip Van Winkle took his legendary 20-year nap . . . Lakes George, Saranac and Champlain . . . and the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence. Bear Mountain is both a summer resort and a ski tournament center . . . and Niagara Falls is, of course, the favorite honeymoon spot of America.

NEW YORK . . . First seen by Henry Hudson, in 1609, when he sailed up the Hudson to the present site of Albany. New York City was the U. S. Capital for a short time . . . George Washington was inaugurated there as our first President. Four United States Presidents were born in New York . . . Martin Van Buren . . . Millard Fillmore . . . Theodore Roosevelt . . . and Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose home, Hyde Park, is now a national shrine. New York has contributed many statesmen and national figures to the country . . . both past and present . . . including James V. Forrestal . . . William G. McAdoo . . . Robert P. Patterson . . . James A. Farley . . . Frances Perkins . . . John Jay . . . Harlan F. Stone . . . Elbert Hubbard . . . Susan B. Anthony . . . Walt Whitman . . . John Howard Payne . . . and Alfred E. Smith.
